Time Spent Planning, Designing New Milking System Never Wasted

Visitors stop to inspect this special needs freestall barn at the Kline family farm during last week's Northern Tier dairy tour sponsored by Monsanto Dairy, Ag Choice Farm Credit, and the Bedford County Farm Bureau. CANTON (Bradford Co.) and PORT MATILDA (Potter Co.) — If there was one theme that prevailed throughout last week's two-day tour of Northern Tier dairy farms, it was that time spent planning and designing a new milking system is never wasted.

At each stop of the tour, where visitors from across southern Pennsylvania inspected seven different facilities in Bradford and Potter counties, owners spoke about how each building project got its beginnings.

For Jay and Faye Good of Bradford County, looking at other facilities was the first step in the process that lead them to building their own technologically up to date 28-stall carousel parlor.

"I can't say we copied any one facility," said Good. "We looked around a lot and we kind of threw a lot of thoughts together."

In a period of five or six years, the Goods estimate that they visited at least 40 farms and are thankful to those who opened their facilities to them.

When you visit a farm, Good said, "You either learn something or come home and appreciate what you have. You always come away positive."

The Goods decided to expand after juggling cows for many years.

From 1986 to 1995, Jay and Faye milked cows in three barns. They decided to consolidate in 1995 by building the first freestall barn.

"At that point we had about 210 cows milking," Jay said.

The cow numbers kept growing and they continued to milk in the 95-stall tiestall barn until completing the parlor. In this latest project, they also built an additional freestall barn and a special needs barn to accommodate the growing herd. Both the

Quality Products, Home Delivery Keep Valewood Farms On Cutting Edge

LORETTO (Cambria Co.) — In our "fast food," "e-mail" world, it's refreshing to find a business that focuses on the "old-fashioned" virtues of "do it right the first time" and the "customer is our most important asset."

That's just what the eight-sibling family corporation of Valewood Farms in Loretto, Cambria County, represents.

From the care of their 200 Holstein cows to the processing and packaging of their milk and dairy products just a few thousand feet from the milking barn, to the "service with a smile" approach to home deliveries, Valewood Farms focuses on quality.

Crop Insurance: Part Of Overall Farm Marketing

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — During the past 10 years, Pennsylvania producers lost upward of $100 million on potential yield loss/disaster payments because many simply didn't sign up.

"That was $100 million left on the table," Gene Gantz, Ag Risk Strategies Inc. president, Millersburg, told about 75 insurance company and agri-industry representatives last week.

That failure to "get the story to producers," according to Gantz, was detailed last week during the Second Annual Crop Insurance Conference at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

Gantz noted that, from the years 1995-2000, for every $1 paid in premium by the producer/crop insurance purchaser, $3.44 was returned. During that time, $51 million in losses were paid across the state.

Statistically, Gantz noted, the targeted ag payment has been "2 to 1" over time, he said. Insurance agents should look at this as a benefit, "to be able to handle a product like this," he said. "No other commodity comes as close."

If Pennsylvania farmers reflected the national average, 75 percent of them would have some form of crop insurance.

When speaking to producers, Gantz noted that emphasizing crop insurance coverage goes with the whole picture. "I really emphasize the value of state assistance in my marketing campaign," he said.

And the benefits of crop insurance extend to every year, not just the "years you have drought. It will pay dividends in good years and bad," Gantz said. "Crop insurance guarantees producers a payday."

For producers to benefit from

Berks Farm-City Council Unveils Farm Aid Event Plans At Banquet

READING (Berks Co.) — About 340 industry representatives and friends of agriculture gathered for Berks County's 18th annual Farm-City Banquet Thursday evening at the Riveredge Restaurant.

Ernest Heckman, president of the Berks County Farm-City Council, opened the banquet, sponsored by the Berks County Chamber of Commerce Farm-City Council. Heckman mentioned the council's upcoming plans, which include the new "Farm Aid" event planned for next year. The council hopes to have entertainment from Nashville, Tennessee, at the event, which will conducted in Strausstown.

One highlight of the banquet is the story of the exchangee's thoughts and impressions about their respective days.

On October 10 John Moore, editor of the Eastern Pennsylvania Business Journal, a weekly paper which circulates in Berks and nearby counties, visited Donald Angstadt, co-owner and service manager for Pikeville Equipment. Angstadt is in business with brothers Roger and David in the family-owned John Deere sales and service company.

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
November 1, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying activity continued light and unaggressive as product remained available across the board. Breast items were ample. Legs and leg quarters were fully sufficient. Wings were readily available at discounted levels. Movement through retail channels was no better than fair, and was best for the occasional feature item. Distributive channels were sluggish as dealers kept a close eye on floorstocks and maintained lean inventories. Trade sentiment was unsettled and lacked optimism approaching the weekend. The market tone ranged barely steady to instances weak.

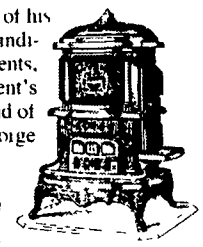
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

NOVEMBER 5–11, 2001

VETERANS DAY, NOV. 11

FIRESIDE CHATROOM

Two years ago, on Monday, November 8, 1999, the then president Bill Clinton carefully staged the first Internet exchange between a U S president and his people Despite being "technologically challenged," Clinton viewed the computer interaction with voters as the wave of the future The exchange was compared with Franklin D Roosevelt's "fireside chats" and to John F Kennedy's live broadcasts of his press conferences Over 30,000 individuals sent questions and comments, hoping for a chance at the president's reply Fittingly, the presidential end of the conversation took place at George Washington University



Preserve the old, but know the new. –Chinese proverb

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Ice in November brings mud in December

Unsteadiness of wind shows changing weather

OPINION

Crop Insurance: Consider It

We received notice Wednesday this week that U.S. Ag Secretary Ann Veneman announced that farmers in nine counties in New York are eligible for USDA emergency farm loans because of losses from weather-related disasters.

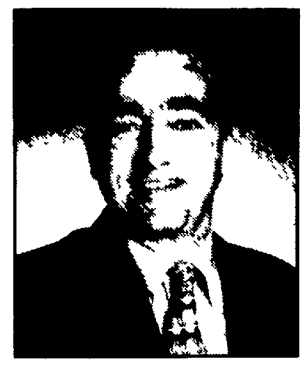
Last issue, we reported on page A44 that Pennsylvania Gov. Mark Schweiker asked the USDA to aid farmers in 49 Pennsylvania counties whose crops have been impacted by drought this summer.

Make the best of a poor situation and include some type of crop or whole farm insurance in your marketing plans. They should be part of operating procedures on your farm business.

On page 1 this week we emphasize the need for producers to sign up for crop insurance, in light of droughts happening with every-other-year regularity.

In a letter sent Sept. 25 this year to Veneman from the Independent Insurance Agents of Pennsylvania, based in Harrisburg, Vince Phillips, government affairs, requested from the 113-year-old trade association that USDA expand the whole farm Adjusted Gross Revenue (AGR) program to all of Pennsylvania, not just the six counties eligible now. Phillips also requested the reauthorization of the additional 50 percent USDA cost-share program in effect this year. Phillips also asked, on behalf of the agent association, to permit eligible crops to be insured as part of the AGR package rather than insured individually with only remaining crops eligible for AGR.

These are great ideas. Producers need all the protection they can get. Let's make this affordable, too.



Now Is The Time

To Incorporate Crop Rotations Into Your Future Plans

Historically, crop rotation has been an important part of cropping systems. For a variety of reasons, crop rotations have been used less in our agricultural systems in recent years. Scientific evidence, however, demonstrates that crop rotations increase yields and provide numerous other benefits. Mark Goodson, agronomy agent in York County, provides the following information about rotations.

Corn following soybeans will often yield 5 to 20 percent more than continuous corn on the same farm. Corn following a hay crop will yield as much as or more than corn following soybeans. Yield responses to crop rotation of 15 percent for soybeans and 10 percent for wheat are common.

Average yields of corn compared in various rotations at Rockspring from 1990-1995 showed the following results: Continuous corn averaged 122 bushels per acre, a corn/soybean rotation averaged 141 bushels per acre, and a four years of corn then four years of alfalfa rotation averaged 137.5 bushels per acre.

Additionally, crop rotations also can decrease the cost of crop production. For example, corn following soybeans can be produced with about 40 pounds per acre less nitrogen fertilizer and without a soil insecticide. Therefore, corn planted after soybeans will cost producers about $25 per acre less than continuous corn. These yield increases and reduced production costs can have a great effect on overall profit.

Diseases such as gray leaf spot in corn, take-all in wheat, and sclerotinia in soybeans can be partially controlled with crop rotation. Where these problems occur, the disease-reduction benefits of crop rotations should be considered in the profitability analysis.

Rotations also can help control insects and weeds. Western corn rootworm larvae are a problem when corn was the previous crop. Corn rootworm insecticide is only recommended in fields where corn is planted following corn. Rotations with a small grain can provide a late summer or fall herbicide application opportunity to control most perennial weeds.

A well-planned rotation can contribute to the more efficient use of plant nutrients. In a three-year corn/alfalfa rotation, for example, manure can be applied during the corn rotation, resulting in efficient used of N and often a buildup of soil P and K levels. During the alfalfa phase of the rotation, when manure is not applied, the forage crop will utilize the soil P and K levels that were built up during the corn phase of the rotation. This combination of nutrient management and crop rotation can reduce or eliminate the need for purchased fertilizer.

Sound crop rotations are often the foundation of a profitable cropping system. There are some initial costs for implementing crop rotations, such as extra equipment, but in the final analysis these costs may be more than overcome by the reduced inputs, timeliness, and higher yields.

For more information about the benefits of crop rotation, ask for the extension publication, "Crop Rotations and Conservation Tillage Series Number One," written by Dr. Greg Roth, Penn State associate professor of agronomy. Additional information is also available at the following Website: http://www.agronomy.psu.edu/Extension/CT/CT.htm.

To Attend The Future Of Food And Farms Summit

The third annual Future of Our Food and Farms Summit is scheduled Nov. 29-30 at the Renaissance Hotel-Philadelphia Airport. The theme of this year's conference is "Spreading the Bounty, Safeguarding the Future."

This year's summit will include four special events. First, four secretaries of agriculture from Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, and New Jersey will keynote the opening session — and will be facilitated by Rick Foster, vice president of the W. K. Kellogg Foundation.

Second, a pre-summit Hunger Congress, put together by the Food Resources Alliance (FRA) with invited state and federal legislators, will highlight evolving public policies impacting hunger in our region. JoAnn Connelly, president of the Greater Philadelphia Food Bank, will moderate this session. Third, Thursday's dinner will feature locally grown foods put together by some of the region's top chefs. Finally, with this year's summit will be the initiation of an annual award to be given to the person, organization, or business that has done the most to benefit the Mid-Atlantic food and farming system.

For more information, visit the Summit Website at www.foodfarm.org or contact Meredith Stone at the Farmers Market Trust, (215) 568-0830, ext. 10.

COMPENSATING THE ALTRUISTIC

Background Scripture:
Matthew 5:1-16.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 24.

The Mount of the Beatitudes on the Sea of Galilee between Tiberias and Capernaum is probably my favorite spiritual spot in all the world. It is both physically beautiful and spiritually uplifting. It is traditionally the site where Jesus delivered the Sermon on the Mount.

I quite realize that Jesus may never have set foot there — but that doesn't diminish it one little bit. I also realize that the so-called Sermon on the Mount was probably not a sermon at all, but a series of teachings which Jesus may have delivered all at one time or on separate occasions.

Matthew tells us that, sitting down on the mountain, Jesus began not to preach, but "opened his mouth and taught them, saying . . . ." (5:2). Even Jesus' seated posture is the proper one for a teacher of Israel in Jesus' time. The term, Sermon on the Mount, is not mentioned in any of the four gospels, but is a name that came to be applied to this passage at a much later time.

While I realize that some sermons can teach us and some teachings may inspire us, the purpose and methods of preaching and teaching are generally different and generally call for different responses from us.

Many years ago, I came to what was initially a disturbing discovery about Matthew 5. One of the strong themes that runs through the Sermon on the Mount as well as other teachings of Jesus is the principle that altruism — giving without the expectation of reward — always brings us some compensation. No giving in the name and spirit of Jesus Christ goes without reward. Virtually nothing that Jesus asks us to be or do does not give us something in return.

Meekness is rewarded with the inheritance of the earth (5), giving mercy results in receiving mercy (7), "Rejoice and be glad, for your reward is great in heaven . . ." (12). And so on.

Getting In Giving

So what is wrong with that? Nothing, except that I had thought that the way of Jesus Christ meant total self-sacrifice. But I have come to realize that I was wrong on both counts.

Self-sacrifice can never be total self-giving, even if our reward is simply the knowledge that we have done the right thing. Jesus himself was rewarded by God for his sacrifice on the cross. So there is always some "getting" in "giving," for God has designed the cosmos that way. Jesus' teachings put "giving" and "getting" on a much higher plane.

Followers of Jesus are promised blessedness — but what is it? The Greek word which Matthew uses here when used in pagan literature denotes the highest stage of happiness and well-being. The comparable Hebrew word means "how happy." How happy are those who are poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

Living by the Beatitudes and the Sermon on the Mount require a great deal of self-denial, but each gives us in return more than that is asked of us. Walking the way of Jesus brings us a blessedness and high happiness that the world can neither match nor take away from us.

Already Blessed

So, we give of ourselves because the grace of God has already been given us. We try to live as Jesus taught, not to earn God's blessings, but out of gratitude for having already received the promise of blessing.

Whatever we do in response to the good news of Jesus Christ is done not to amass merit for ourselves, but to bear witness to the goodness of God. "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and give glory to your Father who is in heaven" (16). We witness to the power of the gospel not so that we may be blessed, but because we are already blessed.

You have heard of the practice of matching gifts: you give $100 to a cause and someone else will match your gift with the same amount. But God not only matches our giving, he infinitely exceeds it. What this means for us is that it is impossible for the follower of Jesus Christ to give away too much. For whatever we give, we have received and will receive far more of God's blessings than we could ever give away.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State
Oct. 26, 2001

Dairy Commodity Markets Unsettled

- Butter prices rise to $1.2675/pound.
- Blocks rise half a penny.
- Barrels drop 2.5 cents/pound.
- USDA announces Class III and IV formula changes.

The dairy markets at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange were mixed this week. Grade AA butter prices rose from $1.25 per pound on Monday, Oct. 22 to $1.2675 by Friday, October 26. Block cheese prices rose from $1.1950 per pound on Monday to $1.2025 by Friday. But barrel prices weakened, dropping from $1.17 per pound on Monday to $1.1450 by Friday.

USDA reports that the higher butter prices this week may indicate greater buying interest. Increased churning activity is offset with buying interest as the retail industry stocks up on butter for the upcoming holiday season. The same can be said for the cheese market. The drop in barrel cheese prices this week, however, could be due to a short-term change in demand because of changes in food service needs.

USDA's Dairy Market News had a very interesting quote this week regarding the market for nonfat dry milk, "The trade is concerned about the potential for changes in the support price for NDM." Western prices for nonfat dry milk remain about support levels in the range of $0.93-$0.96 per pound this week. Despite this lower price for nonfat dry milk, excess inventory continues to move into the Dairy Price Support program. In addition, there are rumors that international prices for nonfat dry milk may be weakening. That implies less demand for U.S. produced nonfat dry milk in overseas markets.

The Secretary of Agriculture has the authority to make one more adjustment in the CCC purchase prices for dairy products (cheese, butter, and nonfat dry milk) this year. I would interpret this to mean that the Secretary may decide to reduce the CCC purchase price for nonfat dry milk from the current level of $0.90 per pound to something lower.

What will a drop in the CCC purchase price for nonfat dry milk mean to U.S. dairy farmers? Well, the USDA will likely purchase less nonfat dry milk, we will export more nonfat dry milk overseas, and MPC imports will be curtailed. In addition, Class III and IV skim values will become equalized. That means Class I, II, and IV values could potentially become lower and more volatile.

Finally, USDA announced a final recommended decision regarding the Class III and IV formulas used in federal orders. Recall that USDA made an earlier recommendation to create separate Class III and IV butterfat values. That decision was struck down in court with a federal injunction. In fact, the court came up with new formula changes. The current USDA decision will result in very little changes in farm-level prices. The allowance for dry whey, used in the Class III formula, will increase slightly from $0.14 per pound to $0.159 per pound.

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
October 31, 2001
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants. Northeast: 1.4918-1.7193. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.4918-1.7193 mostly 1.5170-1.5929

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices. 1.0000-1 1000; Class III - spot prices - 1 0000-1 1800.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week 100; last week 74, last year 26. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week 49; last week 49; last year 54.

Milk production is steady to slightly higher in most parts of the East. Milder weather is more common in the Southeast and milk output is increasing. In the Northeast, the weather has been nearly ideal for milk output, but typically, November is the low point in the annual milk production cycle. Fat and protein tests (yield) are improving in all sections of the region. Fluid milk supplies are more than ample for Class I needs and surplus milk volumes are increasing, particularly in the Middle Atlantic and Northeast areas. Milk is still tight in Florida and other Southeast states and surplus milk volumes are limited. Imports of milk are up this week in Florida; steady elsewhere. Bottled milk sales are holding at fair to good levels in more areas of the East. Florida contacts are seeing the winter residents returning and milk sales are improving. The influx of winter residents accounted for most of the gain in milk imports by Florida handlers this week.

The condensed skim market is about steady, but prices for Class II condensed did move lower this week. Demand for wet solids is holding fairly steady, but price competition from NDM is pulling some users away from the market.

The fluid cream market doesn't seem as weak as it has been. Improved demand by cream cheese and sour cream makers and bottlers has left less excess cream to be cleared to butter makers. Some churning facilities did not buy any outside cream this week and chose to process their own cream. Others, who do not have their own supply, did seem willing to pay slightly higher multiples than they have been during the past month or so. Ice cream production and sales are seasonal, but with lower cream prices, some makers have gotten back into the spot market to replenish inventories However, not everyone is convinced that the current butter price at the CME will hold at current levels and some are Some producers are making more ice cream now to allow them to be down for longer periods during the upcoming holidays.

'City Boy' Believes Education Calms Consumers' Fears

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

RHEEMS (Lancaster Co.) — "I'm a city boy who's still trying to figure out how I got here," Andy Bradford said of his recent appointment as president of the Lancaster County Poultry Association.

Don't allow that statement to create the misconception that Bradford isn't qualified or doesn't enjoy the appointment. Since he was graduated with a degree in animal science from Penn State, Bradford has filled several different career positions for the poultry industry.

Now he is eager to tackle the concerns facing the industry. As president of the association, one of Bradford's main concerns is the misunderstandings that erupt between the agricultural and nonfarming community.

"People tend to fear what they can't see," Bradford said. He pointed out that the public often fears swine barns and large chicken houses because they cannot see inside of them, and therefore don't understand the need for the barns.

"We fear most what we can't understand. The more we can show the public what is actually happening, the more positive message we are portraying," Bradford said.

He has some ideas how communication can be improved. But first, a look into Bradford's background provides some perspective on his position.

While reviewing the signposts along his career path, Bradford said, "I guess you could say, everything happened in college."

The "city boy" had planned to become a veterinarian because he was always intrigued with animals and agriculture. One of the first professors he had at Penn State reminded the students that less than one-half of those pursuing a veterinarian degree would achieve it. Bradford was told that an ag science degree would enable him to do anything a vet could do except prescribe medication.

At that time, a four-year degree seemed much more enticing than a long, rigorous course of veterinarian studies. But "chickens" was still a long way from his mind—except when he traveled to the Delmarva area to visit relatives.

Bradford said, "I fell in love with that area and admired the thriving poultry industry."

During Bradford's senior year at Penn State, he was elected president of the Poultry Science Club. After graduation, Bradford was employed by Pennfield Feeds for one and a half years. Immediately, he became active in the county poultry association and was soon appointed secretary of the board.

Bradford resigned from that position when he was offered a job as a broiler flock supervisor for Perdue in North Carolina. By this time, Andy had married Amy, who grew up on a beef farm and was active in 4-H.

He and his wife moved to North Carolina. But they missed Lancaster County, so when Pennfield offered him a position 10 months later, Bradford took it, and the couple returned to the county. Again, he became active in the poultry association.

Bradford soon jumped fields to become feed salesman for Wenger Feeds.

"I had nutrition classes in college and soon developed a knack for it," Bradford said of deciphering nutritional needs.

He works with independent layer customers — a dwindling number among poultry producers.

"We value independent growers. We believe in the family farm and want it to prosper," Bradford said. Independent producers are more inclined to drop out of the industry than contract growers who are guaranteed a paycheck, regardless of fluctuating prices. Bradford said that Wengers has nine million chickens under contract, compared to three-quarter million owned by independent growers.

"The ag industry has faced some tough times in the past 30 months, and many of the independent producers have been losing money," Bradford said.

He said the industry blames much of the tough times on the influx of eggs from the Midwest. The Midwest has an abundance of grain and build poultry complexes simply to use up the grain, even if they have not established markets for the eggs. This complicates the local market for eggs. Although grain is cheaper in the Midwest, transportation costs are higher, resulting in a more level playing field for local feed companies.

Bradford isn't certain how the Sept. 11 events will influence the egg industry. Although reports show fewer consumers are eating out and this reduces the volume sold to restaurants, recession often benefits the ag industry. During a recession, people pinch pennies and cook more at home. Eggs are a great source of protein and cost less than other protein sources.

Bradford said that he has enjoyed working with different aspects of the poultry industry. He believes his experience with working with broiler and egg production and with contract and independent growers enables him to grasp the complexity of the different problems each group faces.

"This county benefits from the strong support of industry and growers for the poultry association," Bradford said. Although North Carolina has a bustling poultry industry, it does not have a local poultry association.

"Producers here can rely on the industry to fight in behalf of their best industries," Bradford said of legislative issues. "We are lucky to have people we do in positions such as PennAg. They look after everyone's benefit. It's important to see both sides of an issue. Without one, you do not have the other."

One benefit that North Carolina has that is not available in Pennsylvania is no sales tax for poultry equipment.

As president, Bradford would like to keep the focus of the organization which is to promote the products and educate consumers.

He believes in the need for continually building public relations with the community. Bradford is proud that the association provides and serves an annual dinner for patrons of Water Street Mission.

Bradford said that eggs were sent to aid in the relief effort at Ground Zero. Mark Lovett of Tyson Foods cooked nine million pounds of chicken for relief workers.

"It's tougher today to be in the industry because of all the legislative changes," Bradford said. "We went from not requiring a nutrient plan to a bureaucracy that is changing from nitrogen to phosphorous-based nutrient management. This is a disadvantage to animal agriculture."

Farming today requires keeping up with the times and not putting our heads in the sand, Bradford said of the misunderstandings that develop between the ag and the non-ag population.

"It's important to listen to people's concerns and correct misconceptions without offending people. This is where education comes through," Bradford said of the association's educational thrust to consumers through seminars, educational dinners, and literature.

"It's important for the ag community to get involved and evaluate situations to see if it is an emotional or legitimate complaint," Bradford said of local government.

A beneficial way to stop misconceptions between farmers and community members, Bradford said, is to conduct tours. Recently, township supervisors were invited to tour a layer facility. An environmental coordinator explained the steps to ensure a safe environment. The township supervisors remarked that they were impressed with the facility. The supervisors discovered that environmental concerns were not as bad as what they had been led to believe by a small vocal opposition group.

Bradford believes that farmers in Lancaster County are better stewards of the land and adhere to belief in stewardship more than farmers in many other areas.

"We don't abuse what we have. And that puts Pennsylvania ahead of many other states," Bradford said.

Lifting Of Lamb Tariff

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Although New Zealand recently applauded the World Trade Organization's lifting of the tariff rate quota on lamb imported into the U.S., it may soon be facing a different challenge regarding the matter: Being able to supply enough lamb to the U.S. market.

Mick Calder, company secretary of the New Zealand Lamb Co. (North America) Ltd., a consortium of four meat companies, told the New Zealand Press that while demand looks optimistic and the company is pushing to increase sales, the difficulty lies in having sufficient meat to supply the market.

Meat New Zealand Sheepmeat Market Manager Terry Brown echoed Calder's opinion by telling the New Zealand Press that the lamb supply would be very tight for the remainder of this year and next.

"Any growth (in the U.S.) will be gradual, particularly if we develop the chilled lamb trade because we need to make sure all the systems are in place," Brown said.

Added Calder, "Given the supply situation and general consensus that we should, if at all possible, fill the European quota, the U.S. market is down the priority list. You don't grow the market unless you can be assured of supply.

"Potentially it (lifting the tariffs) lets the companies free up some other markets, and not fill the European quota if prices are right," Calder said.

The tariff rate quota (TRQ), which ends Nov. 15, 2001, placed a tariff rate of three percent on imports up to 74 million pounds and a rate of 24 percent above that level.

Given the weak lamb prices in the U.S. and the strong U.S. dollar, the tariff levels were not having much of an impact.

USDA Buys Lamb, Suspends Program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) of the U.S. Department of Agriculture on Oct. 18, 2001, purchased 144,000 pounds of American boneless lamb roasts at a cost of approximately $525,600. The price paid for the lamb roasts was $3.65 per pound. Offers were accepted by Mountain Meadows Lamb Corp. and Silverton Ridge Farms.

AMS also announced that purchases would be temporarily suspended until January 2002.

American Wool Council Conducts Trade Missions

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — The American Sheep Industry Association's (ASI) American Wool Council conducted two successful trade missions — one in which three ASI representatives met with European wool buyers and a second in which two ASI representatives met with South American buyers.

While the actual sales, which are made are proprietary information of the seller and buyer, strong interest for trials has been expressed by a significant number of potential new customers. These are important successes in the development of the ASI international marketing programs to increase the number of potential buyers actively involved in purchasing American wool.

The purpose of the trade missions is to allow American wool industry representatives to educate potential foreign buyers on the attributes of American wool. ASI has also conducted reverse trade missions, during which it brings potential foreign wool buyers to the United States to tour various segments of the U.S. wool industry.

Shipman Heads USDA's Farm And Foreign Agricultural Services

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman has announced the selection of Thomas Hunt Shipman as deputy under secretary for farm and foreign agricultural services.

As deputy, Shipman will provide leadership to agencies and programs within the Farm and Foreign Agricultural Services mission. He will offer general direction of programs administered by the Farm Service Agency and the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Risk Management Agency, the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation and the Foreign Agricultural Service. These agencies are comprised of more than 18,000 employees and administer more than $34 billion in USDA programs.

The American Sheep Industry Association (ASI) routinely works with the Farm Service Agency on behalf of the U.S. sheep industry on various programs such as the recent lamb and wool payments, which have resulted in $60 million paid to growers and feeders in the last 12 months.

ASI also works with the Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS) on the promotion of wool and wool products overseas. FAS recently awarded ASI $100,000 for its Quality Samples Program. The funding will be used to ship samples of U.S. raw wool, scoured wool and wool top to Mexico and China.

Transition Cow Workshop Planned For Dairy Producers

SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Many problems with early lactation cows begin during the dry period. Cows that have a smooth transition from the dry period into lactation are more likely to have high production.

To help dairy producers sharpen cow observation skills, consider nutritional issues of importance and identify problem cows before they become clinical problems, dairy producers are encouraged to attend a transition cow workshop planned for Friday, Nov. 16, in Cumberland County.

The workshop will run from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. starting at the Agway-Keystone Building at 510 W. King Street in Shippensburg. Lab sessions will be conducted at Jeff and Michelle Reasner's farm. Advance registration is requested for the session.

Dr. Arlen Mills, regional extension veterinarian, will work with the group sessions along with local veterinarians. Extension Dairy Management Agent Vinton Smith will address human resource management issues and standard operating procedures. Tim Beck, York, will present the transition cow nutrition section for the meeting.

The workshop will focus on skills and methods for detecting problem cows before and after calving. Participants will learn how to quickly recognize when a cow is becoming sick, and to perform a basic examination of the animal. Without proper management, transition cows can be a major cause of lost production and profit on dairy farms. If the people working with cows can quickly identify problem animals, then the speed and effectiveness of treatment will be greatly increased.

Participants will learn to observe a group of cows from a distance and detect those that might have a problem. They will be taught how to recognize common symptoms, and which cows are most likely to have particular diseases. The participants will then examine cows and practice picking out individuals that might be showing signs of trouble.

The morning program will feature information on transition cow nutrition and management issues and will highlight special consideration for transition cows. A sample transition cow management protocol will be presented to provide participants with ideas on how to set up a management strategy for their own operations in consultation with their veterinarian.

Participants will learn a systematic method for body condition scoring dairy cows that will help them identify thin or overconditioned cows most likely to have transition cow metabolic problems.

During the afternoon session, participants will divide into small groups of three to five learners and each group will work with a veterinarian. The small groups will have the opportunity to perform a hands-on examination of a cow. The veterinarian will demonstrate basic examination procedures and each participant will practice the procedures. Skills will include listening with a stethoscope to various internal sounds such as the heart, lungs, and rumen; how to "ping" for a displaced abomasum and how to test for ketosis and mastitis.

Workshop participants will be equipped with durable learning materials they can use on their farms to teach their co-workers some of the skills they learned.

Fees for the workshop to cover materials and lunch are $40/participant. Register in advance by calling the Customer Service desk at the York County Extension Office (717) 840-7408; fax your registration to (717) 755-9657 or get more information and a registration form online at the Capital Region web site http://Capitaldairy.cas.psu.edu/. For more information, contact Tim Beck, Regional Dairy Program coordinator, or call your local county Extension office.

National Grange To Meet In Cedar Rapids Nov. 12-18

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Grange, the nation's oldest farm and rural public interest organization, will conduct its 135th annual convention in Cedar Rapids, Iowa November 12-18.

Headquarters will be the Crowne Plaza Hotel at 350 First Avenue, N.E. Between three and four thousand Grangers are expected to attend the convention. Some events will be open to the general public.

The convention is multi-purpose. Delegates will discuss and vote on hundreds of resolutions from local and state Granges. Those that pass will establish policy goals for the coming year and, thus, guide the National Grange's legislative and regulatory efforts in 2002.

The convention will be a week-long celebration. Half a dozen awards banquets for national programs such as best community service project and member recruitment program will be held throughout the week.

Junior Grangers, kids 5 to 14, will have their own special events and a banquet, and the Youth/Young Adults Division will install their Ambassadors for 2002. Winners of national arts and crafts competitions will have their quilts, stuffed toys, photographs and paintings on display, and a talent contest will feature vocal, instrumental and variety acts. Both the exhibits and the talent contest are open to the public at no charge.

According to National Program Enrichment Director Clyde G. Berry, "The citizens of Cedar Rapids can see some of the finest needlework, woodworking, painting and photography produced in rural America from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday, November 14 through Saturday, November 18 in Ballrooms III and IV of the Crowne Plaza."

Kermit W. Richardson, National Master (president) of the Grange said the Grange is very pleased to be back in the Hawkeye State, the "heartland of American Agriculture," for its 135th annual convention. The Grange was in Des Moines in 1909 for its 43rd and Cedar Rapids in 1980 for its 114th. He noted that the Iowa State Grange was the first State Grange organized shortly after the National Grange was established and that Iowa also provided the second Master of the National Grange, the fiery 19th century prairie populist, Dudley W. Adams.

On Monday, November 12, at 10 a.m. in Ballrooms I and II of the Crowne Plaza, Richardson will deliver his annual keynote address. He will explain the Grange position on issues affecting American agriculture, especially the pending Farm Bill, as well as general rural issues such as health care, education and rural access to new communications technologies.

Leroy Watson, National Grange legislative director stated, "With 300.000 members in 37 states, the National Grange is a rural voice in Washington, D.C. We want the citizens of this major agricultural state to know where we stand on issues important to their well-being and urge them to come out and hear Master Richardson."

Coaly Society To Mark 50th Year

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Penn State Coaly Society will celebrate its golden anniversary on Friday, Nov. 16, at Hoag's Celebration Hall in State College.

This is the evening before the Ag Alumni tailgate, so former members are encouraged to make it a great weekend at Penn State.

Coaly Society was founded in 1951 to recognize Penn State students who excel in leadership in College of Agricultural Sciences activities, and the evening is designed to give Coaly alumni an opportunity to reunite and reflect upon the evolution of Coaly Society through the years.

Another highlight will be the initiation of the fall 2001 members. The banquet begins with a social hour at 6:30 p.m. and the meal at 7:30. Tickets are $22 and can be reserved by calling the Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences Alumni Society at (814) 865-2717 before Nov. 12.

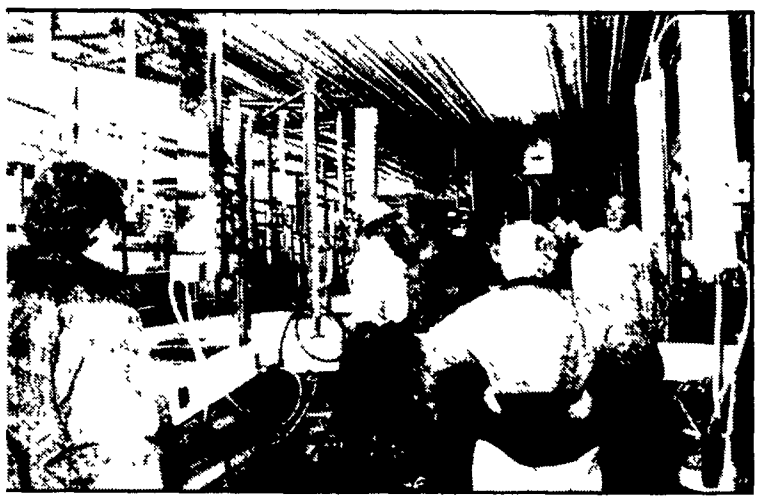
freestalls as well as the walkway feature slatted floors with a manure pit underneath the building. A two-way sort gate allows cow handlers to easily move cows from the main walkway to the special needs barn or palpation rail. A bedded pack in the special needs barn provides comfort for cows that are freshening.

The Goods couldn't be happier with their new setup, which allows them to milk the entire herd three times a day in less time that it took to milk twice a day in the old tiestall barn. They now milk 350 cows in two and a half hours.

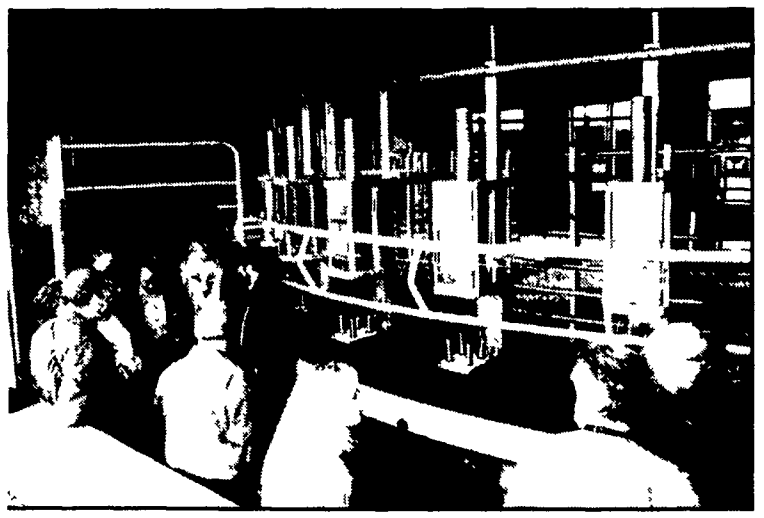
Their four children have also play an important part in the operation. Although oldest daughter Kendra has left home, their son Derek, a senior in high school, helps with equipment and fieldwork. Daughters Korlissa and Karla, both teenagers, take charge of the afternoon milking. The Goods also rely on four employees who help the operation run smoothly.



In an effort to reduce costs, Roger and Cathy Brown chose to retrofit a double 8 herringbone parlor into their existing tie-stall barn. The results, they say, are more than adequate.

Sons Gary and Glenn are now in partnership with their father, Ron. Each partner tends to his area of expertise. Glenn leans more toward herdsman responsibilities while Gary manages the 13 mostly part-time employees and specializes in fieldwork. Ron oversees the entire operation.

The decision to expand and update facilities was largely prompted by a tour that Ron and Glenn took in 1995.



The first stop provided a glimpse of Jay and Faye Good's 28-stall carousel parlor. The entire facility was tailored exactly to their wants and needs through careful planning. The family milks 340 cows three times a day.

"We came back from that tour and said this is something that makes life a lot easier, if you can get an operation where you can streamline things — if you can get employees to do a certain thing pretty much every day instead of doing umpteen number of things. This way you can show them what to do, and they can go about doing it," said Glenn.

The 13 employees have a set schedule which is developed months in advance.

"Most of the employees are part-time. Everybody gets every

Kline Family

For the Kline family, moving into their new facilities in November of 1997 proved to be a graceful transition, thanks a great deal to thoughtful planning. They moved from a stall barn to freestalls and a double-eight parallel parlor and milk 360 cows three times a day with plans to be milking 400 cows soon.

The Klines started changing their operation long before they moved into their new facilities. They purchased open heifers so they could choose matings and started making a switch to silage trenches instead of relying totally on their upright silos.

"It was basically a three-year period in which we geared up for it," said Glenn. "Everything just kind of flowed together and I think that's the reason why — we went out and looked at a lot of farms and looked for a builder."

other weekend off. They know from now until Christmas exactly what days they're going to work," Gary said.

The Klines are also sensitive to the workload that the employees carry.

"We want them to know that we're not going to ask them to do something that we're not willing to do," said Gary. "They get a real kick out if it when I have to ask them how they've been doing something."

As for the future, the Klines are always willing to consider new ideas. This past spring they completed a hospital barn to better monitor those cows with special needs and plan to learn as much as they can from neighbors who are trying new things.

"Things will be changing. Hopefully we'll be able to change with them," said Gary.

Brown Family

Priorities have changed for Roger and Kathy Brown as well. Rather than building from the ground up, they chose to retrofit a double-eight herringbone parlor into their existing tiestall barn.

Five years ago, they decided to expand their herd to increase cash flow. They didn't want to get really big, so they chose to grow from 75 cows to 180.

In order to make it happen, the Browns first built a freestall facility and milked in the backside of that while building the parlor. They then moved lots of concrete in one section of the barn, while keeping tiestalls in another section of the barn for any cows with special needs.

Cost was a major factor in their decision to expand in this manner. By using their existing facility, they eliminated the need to build a separate building. They also were able to save some costs by buying a second freestall barn as a package and hiring a local contractor to build it.

The tiestall barn was very labor-intensive and their move helped streamline the milking process. They now milk three times a day, averaging 80 pound a day per cow. The parlor allows them to milk 60 cows an hour. The Browns are happy with the results of their expansion.

"I'm satisfied with this parlor," said Roger. "If I was building from scratch, I might have done it differently, but we did this for 40 to 50 percent of what it would have cost to build a new facility."

The bottom line for the Browns is that all things have meshed together well.

"We're glad we did it. It was a big change," said Roger.

Said Kathy, "We're still fine-tuning it. We keep on working at what we have."

Gorrell Family

Glenn and Robin Gorrell took another route to expansion. They have been working at updating facilities since they started farming in 1981. They milk 390 cows in a double-eight parallel parlor which is expandable to double-12, three times a day. Cows are housed in a six-row greenhouse barn.

"We're kind of do-it-yourself'ers," said Glenn. "We decided on building a greenhouse barn for the freestalls largely because of cost."

Because they started farming completely on their own, equity was an issue.

"When we built the first 144 stalls in the first part of the greenhouse barn, we had about $700 per stall in it. The most important thing is that we didn't lose any equity by building a big barn. That got us to where we could build on because we didn't have that much debt," said Glenn. "That enabled us to get the freestall built up and to add a nice parlor."

Cow comfort is a big consideration for the Gorrells. Bedding with sand not only provides a comfortable place for the cows to rest, but gives an added benefit in the winter when floors might otherwise become slippery.

"We took the cows out of a tiestall barn and put them in a freestall barn and they accepted the stalls right away," said Glenn. "We've never had a cow split herself. There's lots of sand to get good footing."

The Gorrells also have tried to keep up with their rotational grazing right through the expansion. However, they are constantly working on schedule adjustments with the three groups of cattle.

"This past year, all three groups were out twice a day for a while. The higher groups are still out once a day," Gorrell said. "It has been harder than we expected. When we were in a tiestall barn, our goal was to feed no stored feed in the summer. Sometimes it worked and other times it didn't."

As cow numbers have increased, the challenges are becoming more difficult. Although they will continue to rotationally graze their cattle, they will probably adjust schedules dramatically next summer.

As for the greenhouse barns, the Gorrells couldn't be happier with them.

"We're really happy and the barns have worked out well. Sometimes you do things and it doesn't turn out right. With this, we're glad it did," said Glenn.

Potter County Dairies

Three Potter County dairies were on the agenda for the second day of the tour.

Rick VanEtten was quick to point out that trying something different isn't always the best way to go.

"The parlor is 25 years old. We retrofitted it with a nine-cow parallel parlor on one side and a five-unit herringbone parlor on the other. I decided to do it because I thought it would push more cows through, but it doesn't work," said Rick.

Although the facilities have proved to offer a labor savings over their former tiestall barn, they are in the planning stages to build a double-10 or double-12 herringbone parlor in the spring.

"We have up-to-date equipment, and we'll move the computerized feeders and automatic identification units into the new parlor," he said. "We'll use the old parlor for the holding area."

VanEtten also plans on increasing cow numbers from 265 milking to 350-400.

"I hope to milk enough to have a trailer load of milk every other day," VanEtten said. "You've got to be looking toward the future. Without a trailer load of milk, you don't have a lot of bargaining power. If you don't grow, business is going to die."

For Melvin and Tim Easton, looking toward the future means another expansion project.

They milk 330 cows in a double-12 parallel parlor. Next year they plan to expand their freestall and increase cow numbers to more than 500. They will probably also finish out their parlor at that time, bringing it to a double-16.

Time Spent Planning, Designing

The father/son team originally decided to build their parlor after milking in three tiestall barns.

"We had three older tiestall barns," said Delanne, Tim's wife. "They were all within about a mile, but we were just too strung out. We had 85 in one barn, 70 in another, and over 70 in a third.

We decided that to get everything centralized, we had to build a new facility."

To start the process, Melvin and Tim traveled all over looking at other facilities, mainly in New York state. They looked at many different types of parlors and brands of parlors before building their own. To further facilitate the expansion, Melvin and Tim formed a partnership in 1995, the same year the barns were built. To house calves, the family built a barn with curtain sides and a clear roof. Calves are in individual pens.

"It's in the greenhouse style," said Delanne, "But it's not a true greenhouse."

Everyone pitches in to help, including Delanne and Tim's two children, Mariah, 10 and Spencer, 8, who help mom feed all the calves in the evenings and in summer. Melvin concentrates largely on the cropping and Tim takes care of cow management. Delanne handles bookwork and calf care.

Although they are happy with the expansion, they have had to face some challenges. One is manure management, the other is finding and keeping quality employees. They continuously work with the conservation department to make sure their manure management program is up to date, and the employee situation is one that they will continue to fine-tune as they move toward the future.

Dale and Carol Hoffman also look toward the future in making decisions and operating their business. They milk 475 cows.

In September 1998, the Hoffmans installed a double-12 parallel parlor that is expandable to 16.

"We're building a dry cow barn right now, and probably will expand down the road," said Carol. "We'll grow within and go in steps."

Their goal is to provide a comfortable living for four families.

"We have two sons and a daughter in the business and we wanted to make a decent living on the farm," said Carol.

Every person has an area of expertise.

"All the family members are in management. One works with cattle, one with equipment, and one with the books. Everybody has strengths and we tried to match them up. It has seemed to work pretty good," said Dale.

The Hoffmans started in a 150-cow stanchion barn and bought heifers to increase cow numbers. They tore out the tiestalls and now use the original barn to house heifers. They are building a dry cow barn.

"We wanted to improve on dry cow management. We have it set up away from the other barn, so there's room for expansion."

If there was one thing they would have done differently, it would have been to beef up biosecurity before bringing animals into their largely closed herd.

Now any animal that comes to the farm is blood-tested for Johnes and BVD.

If there was one piece of advice the Hoffmans wanted to leave with their visitors, it was this:

"The more farms you can visit, the more you can learn. Even if you're not planning to build, you can still use some of the ideas on you farm. A tour is always good for everybody."

crop insurance, Gantz noted, it is more important than almost any single thing they do in farming "to get those ag records in shape." And work those plans in with some form of forward price contracts, which work hand in hand with crop insurance.

According to statistics provided in a color handout by Gantz, crops fail in Pennsylvania 67.9 percent of the time because of drought. Freezes account for 4.3 percent, heat 4.8 percent, wildlife 5.2 percent, cold, wet weather 5.9 percent, and excessive moisture 6.3 percent. About $77 million in losses were paid between 1981-2000 because of these conditions.

Buying something like Crop Revenue Coverage, or CRC, is "the foundation for my crop marketing," said Gantz.

"We have all the tools to get out and reach growers that we haven't reached at this point," he said.

Several other programs were explained at the meeting, including the Indexed Income Protection (IP) policy, which protects producers against reductions in gross income whether either a crop's price or yield declines from early-season expectations; Multi-Peril Crop Insurance (MPCI), which covers losses because of drought, excess rain, excess wind, fire, freeze,

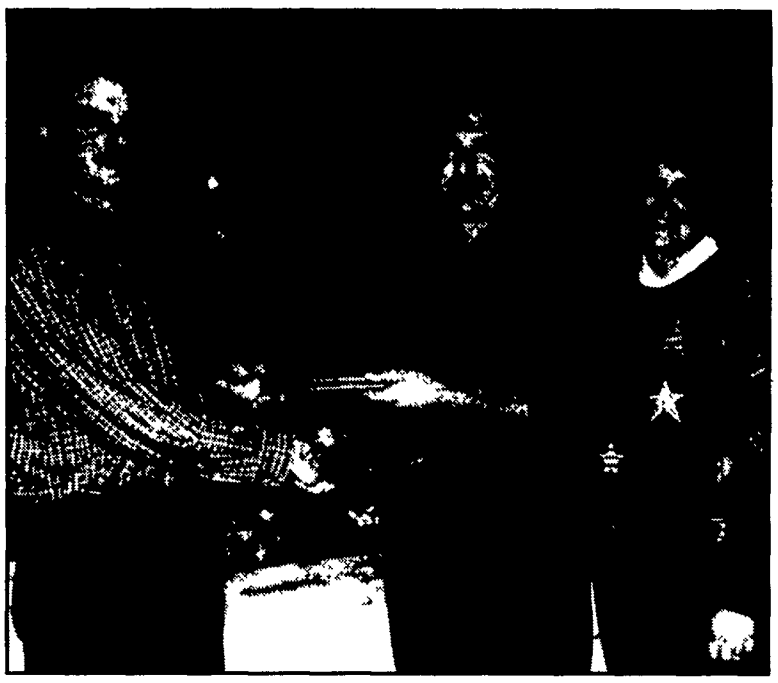
RICHLAND (Lebanon Co.) — Holstein enthusiasts packed the Tulpehocken Trinity UCC hall here Oct. 26 for the annual Lebanon County Holstein Club banquet.

Highlights of the evening included production award presentations to Junior Holstein Club members. Youth were recognized for their top milk, fat, and protein producing cows.

Daniel Eberly took first place for milk and protein in the 2-year-old category, with Lindsay Horning winning for butterfat production.

In the 3-year old class, Dustin Lentz's cow, Dream-On Judge Holly, was tops for milk and protein, checking in at 35,603 pounds of milk and 1,006 of protein. Lindsay Horning's cow, Turnpike View Jubilant Britney, placed first for butterfat with a 4.8 percent test and a total of 1,209 pounds of fat.

Kole Reist's 4-year old cow topped the class in all three production areas.



Lebanon County Holstein Club president Daniel Brandt presents high BAA herd award to Kirby and Sheryl Horst.

In the 5-year old class, Daniel Eberly won for milk and protein, with Kendel Reist placing first in the butterfat category,

Youth senior and junior dairy quiz bowl teams were recognized for their achievements at the February Pa. Junior Convention.

The junior "A" team of Aaron Hoover, Kyle Seyfert, Chanelle Horst, and Joel Bomgardner, placed second out of 16 teams at the convention, while the senior team of Jared Zimmerman, Brad Hoover, Tim Getz, and Jeremy Meck took second place out of 13 teams.

Chanelle Horst was named outstanding bowl team member.

Junior club leader Duane Nolt also announced a $500 scholarship to be awarded to Amy Habecker.

Nolt said the scholarship money will be well-invested in the third year ag major at Penn State.

"(Habecker) will be impacting the lives of many individuals" through her career and future actions, Nolt said.

Kirby and Sheryl Horst of Newmanstown were awarded for a breed age average (BAA) of 110.7 percent, the highest of any herd in the county.

Pennsylvania youth production winners from Lebanon Co. selected earlier in the year for milk, butterfat, and protein include Todd Getz, Rachel Krall, Katie Lentz, and Kendra Trago.

Lebanon County youth awarded for high producing cows were Daniel Eberly, Dustin Lentz, Kendel Reist, Lindsay Horning, and Kole Reist.

History Recalled At Chester County Holstein Banquet

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

ATGLEN (Chester Co.) — Stories about the rich tradition of Holstein dairying and breeding were highlights of the 50th anniversary banquet of the Chester County Holstein Club here Tuesday.

More than a dozen former dairymen who had spent a large part of their life working with the breed attended the banquet. Six members of a discussion panel shared their memories of challenge and success dating back to their first days in the Holstein business.

Furman Gyger Jr. said that as a young man in 1951 he was part of a group of dairy farmers that rekindled interest in a Holstein club in the county.

But the history of Holsteins in the area is older than that, he pointed out.

"This goes way back before (1951)," he said.

Gyger said he took on the responsibility of tending his father's herd of Holsteins at the age of only 12, inheriting early on a lifetime interest in purebred cows.

Various members of the panel spoke of their good fortune working with Holsteins over the years. They thanked God and others who had influenced them and gave encouragement to young farmers who are carrying on the tradition.

Donald Hostetter said that Holstein breeders need to take some risks to succeed.

"I was willing to stick my neck out a little," he said. "Sometimes I lost, but more often than not (it paid off)."

Hostetter said the happiest years of his life were spent on the dairy farm with his family.

Awards were also presented at the banquet to youth and adults for high protein producing cows, as well as for the top breed age average (BAA) herd, and for top lifetime production.

Betsy Brown was recognized for both the outstanding 4-H Holstein project and high protein 2-year old cow.

Erica Lloyd had the high protein mature cow in the youth category, while Nolan King swept high protein honors in the adult category for both 2-year old and mature cows.

High BAA herd went to Eric and Peggy Evans, with Glenn Ranck taking home the award for high lifetime production.

and making home deliveries since grandpap C.A. Itle began the business in 1933. But even before that time, the Itle family delivered raw milk to nonfarm neighbors via horse and wagon, or horse and sleigh in the long winter months.

In 1933, C.A. Itle began Valewood Farms with 30-40 Guernsey cows in the old bank barn. The milk was vat-pasteurized in a small facility a few hundred feet from the barn. The processing facilities utilized the natural springs on the farm and the milk was cooled in a spring-fed brine water solution. It was then hand-bottled, hand-capped, and delivered to customers in the surrounding area. When the bottles were returned, they were hand washed.

Improvements were made about every 10 years, as the business grew and times changed. C.A. Itle's sons Gerald and Russell ran Valewood Farms from 1955 to 1987. In 1987, seven of Russell Itle's eight children formed a family corporation, buying out their uncle's share of the business.

Valewood Farms employs 30 full-time and 15 part-time people, about one-third of which are family members. Today, all eight of the children play an active role in the operation of Valewood Farms, which is in many ways a look back in time.

The facilities at Valewood Farms processing center are modern, efficient, and meet the strict state regulations for milk handling. The processing plant of today is a shadow of yesteryear, as the original sections of tile flooring can be noted. Rather than scrapping the old facilities to build a big new one, the Itles have chosen to gradually add on as the business required additional space.

In 2000, Valewood built onto their cooler area, expanding for more cooler space, some offices, and a modest retail store.

The dairy farm facilities are much the same. The freestall barn and milking parlor were state-of-the-art new in the 1960s. Many improvements for cow comfort have been made over the years, but there are no plans in the immediate future for a new expansion there either. The Itles are content to continue to work with facilities that work well, without having a need to have the biggest or newest facili-

What sets this operation apart is the family's commitment to quality, from start to finish. Each of the eight siblings in the corporation has an area of expertise. The oldest brother is Joseph Itle D.V.M., a large animal veterinarian in practice in the Morrisons Cove area of Blair and Bedford counties. Dr. Itle has an active role in the success of Valewood Farms. He makes weekly visits to the farm for herd health checkups, biweekly herd checks, and is always available for troubleshooting. He has been instrumental in helping Valewood Farms attain Leucosis-free and Johnnes-free status.

In the '30s and '40s, TB was the hot issue in dairy and C.A. Itle marketed milk from a TB-free herd. Today, the Itles believe that Leucosis and Johnnes are the big issues and take pride in offering milk from a clean herd.

hail, etc; and Adjusted Gross Revenue (AGR), which insures the revenue of the entire farm, rather than an individual crop.

Producers should look for the "best bang for the buck," Gantz said. This should appeal to many farmers in the state. He said that, in Pennsylvania, 85 percent of the farms have gross receipts of less than $100,000, so "whole farm revenue coverage" has appeal.

In a letter from Sam Hayes Jr., state secretary of agriculture, Hayes reminded producers that the Crop Insurance Assistance Program has been extended for crop year 2002. With this coverage, CAT (catastrophic) coverage is free and buy-up coverage is discounted.

Hayes has been instrumental in making crop insurance more reflective of Pennsylvania farming.

According to Hayes, "Crop insurance is a type of protective shield that will help fend off the economic harm caused by natural disasters such as drought. It helps get agriculture economically to the next growing season."

Jay Harper, Penn State professor of ag economics, noted that AGR coverage is good only in six counties so far - Berks, Carbon, Lackawanna, Lehigh, Monroe, and Northampton - but "it covers the whole farm, not just the crops," he said.

Harper emphasized the need to make a "political push" to extend the AGR coverage to other counties in the state. AGR does apply, however, as long as the adjusted gross income from livestock on a farm doesn't exceed 35 percent of receipts.

Harper pointed out case studies on AGR that are available on the Web at http://www.aec.msu.edu/agecon/blackj/AGR.htm.

business manager. He is responsible for keeping the books and managing the very challenging product supply with product demand. Valewood processes all of their own milk, along with the milk from four other local dairy farms, whose commitment to quality equals that of Valewood. Bill oversees a large portion of the business, in both the processing and production areas.

Matt Itle is Valewood Farms maintenance and building manager. He is credited with engineering improvements in the freestall barn that allow for greater cow comfort. He is heading up a project that will allow for more room for dry cows and bred heifers. Rather than hire in a lot of outside workers, Valewood Farms uses the expertise they have from within first and then hires local people to help. This hands-on approach to everything is one of the keys to quality from start to finish.

Jan Itle is the barn manager and herdsperson. She spends most of her time making sure that the cows at Valewood Farms are comfortable and content. She and her brothers strongly believe that from contented cows comes a better product. The milkers and feed managers report to Jan and she personally spends many hours with the cows. She strongly believes that good cow management comes from spending time with the cows. Jan spends as much time with the cows as she can to insure that she is on top of any potential problems.

Jan Itle and "Lilac" one of the older cows and former 4-H project animals at Valewood Farms.

Pat Itle is the farm manger. Valewood Farms comprises 600 acres of crop land, approximately one-half of which is rented ground. Because of their location in the mountains of Cambria County, their growing season is a bit shorter than their neighbors down the mountain. Three crops of hay are all they expect to get in a summer. It is vitally important that Pat manages the crops for the unique environment and optimal quality of forages.

Tim Itle is the shop manager for the fleet and farm maintenance. Valewood Farms has a complete shop, with two full-time mechanics on staff. They handle their own maintenance and repairs, from the farms tractors to the route delivery trucks.

Andy Itle is the route manager. Valewood Farms has 10-12 trucks making deliveries six days a week in a 40-mile radius from their home base. The bulk of their business is home delivery, with 5,000 accounts in Cambria and neighboring Blair County. They also sell and deliver to retail outlets, schools, and prisons.

Joyce Itle serves customers Valewood Farms ice cream in the new dairy store.

Dan Itle is the sales supervisor. His job is focused on selling more product. He educates the route delivery people on how to sell the product line. Here again, the focus is on quality and service, two things that set Valewood Farms products apart from other products in the market place.

Valewood Farms offers a full product line including whole, two percent, one percent, and reduced fat chocolate milk, buttermilk, half and half, whipping cream, cottage cheese, sour cream, French onion dip, butter, and 17 flavors of ice cream. Unlike other small processing dairies, Valewood Farms makes all of the dairy products they sell. While the Itles will admit this may not be the most cost ef-

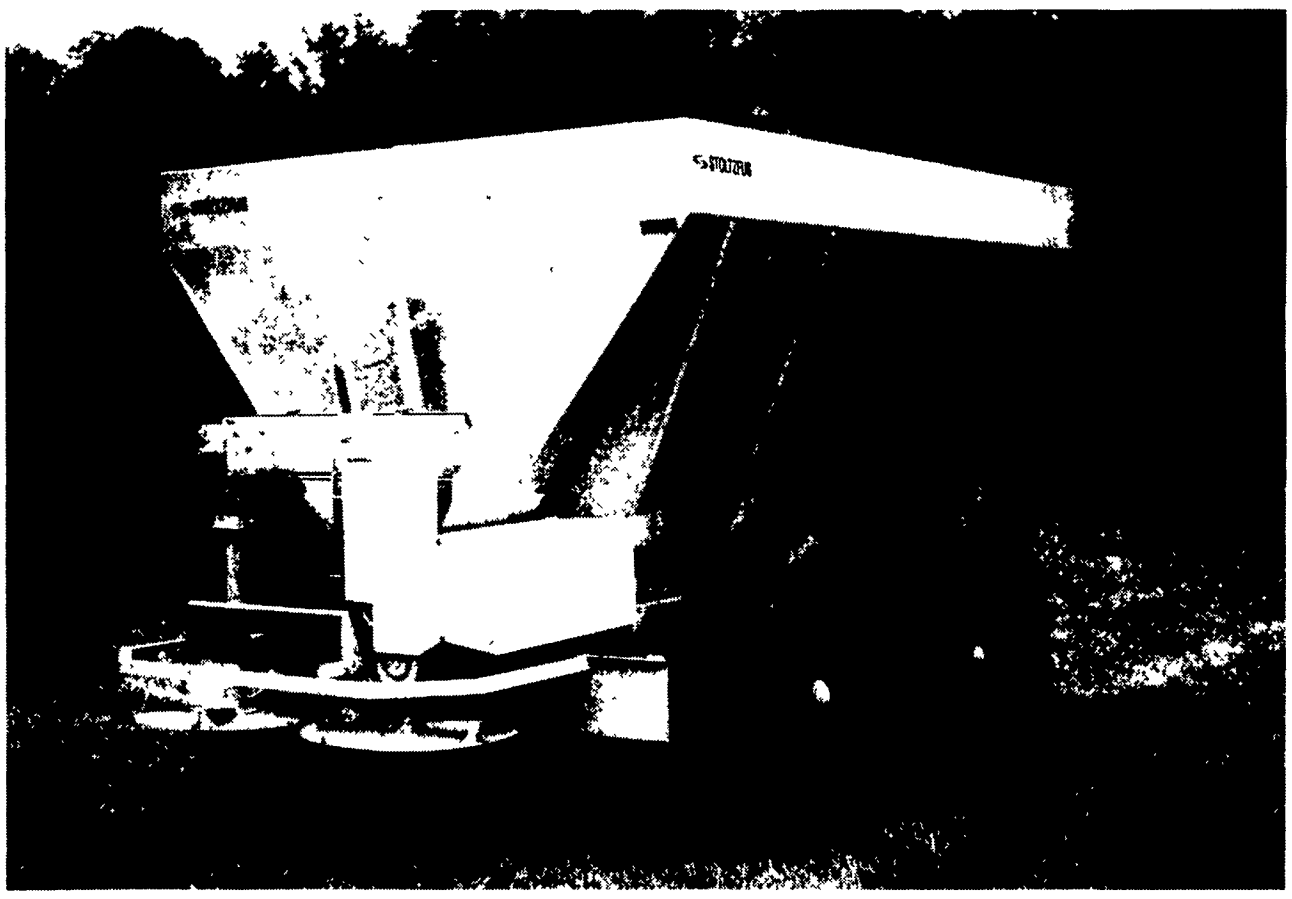
It's Time To Lime!



When spreading stockpiled lime, for example. The Stoltzfus Wet Lime Spreader is likely the most powerful spreader of its kind on the market today. You see, we've been building them since 1945, and farmers are still using Stoltzfus Wet Lime Spreaders they've had for 20, even 30 years. Our special drag chain is 4 times stronger than stainless steel, and handles frozen and heavy stockpiled lime with ease. Plus for spreading compost, composted sludge, poultry litter and certain fertilizers, the WLS is without equal for sheer volume spreading. We call that performance. You'll call it terrific

We hope you compare a Stoltzfus WLS with other spreaders. It makes us look even better. Price? Sure we may be a little more. But when you end up replacing cheaper units in a few short years, what have you saved? Stoltzfus quality always pays for itself many times over.

Just how tough is a Stoltzfus WLS? Plenty tough. Call today. We'll tell you where to find the dealer nearest you, and send you free literature to inspect

WILL YOUR FAMILY FARM CONTINUE?
Roland P. Freund
Regional Farm Management Agent

"Son, some day this will all be yours!"

This statement reflects the good intention of many a farm parent. If this is a stated goal of the family, something must be done to ensure that it will happen. If steps are not taken to do so, that son can end up with very little when the final estate settlement is made.

This is the first of three articles which are to be published this fall. To begin to answer the question, let's look at what needs to be considered:

• Is the business viable? To be viable, a business needs to have adequate resources (equity), current technology, and the potential to be profitable for many years into the future. If the business is so deep in debt that it cannot update facilities or equipment, it may not be possible for the next generation to turn it into a viable operation. It might support the present generation for the rest of their working life, but it could be an intolerable burden for the next generation.

Assuming that the business has good potential, then we can proceed with the next step.

• Is a family member willing to farm? If no potential heirs are working the farm now, chances are slim that they will want to take it over later. When there are members willing to farm, then parents must take the steps to equip them to continue the business.

• Is son/daughter assuming responsibility? A smooth transition will be achieved when the next generation has experience with the responsibilities of both production and financial management. With responsibility there must also be authority to make decisions and execute control measures in the business.

A parent who has delegated authority to an heir will work under the direction of that heir when performing duties in the heir's department of the operation. By the time parents are 65 years old, the heirs should be managing the entire business operation.

• Is the farming heir building equity? Children who leave the farm go out into the world and normally build equity in their homes, businesses, retirement accounts, yachts, motor homes, etc. If the farming heir is to survive, he or she must build at least as much equity in the farm business.

Farming is a very capital-intensive business. Typical farms have grown over a period of one generation from 100 acres and 40 cows to 400 acres and 200+ cows. When parents examine such a situation, they need to ask themselves: "How much did the kids who left the farm contribute to this growth?"

Roland P. Freund

They also need to ask:

• How much will the nonfarming heirs inherit? Unless estate planning is done and sweetheart wills are changed, most nonfarming hears will share equally in all the farm assets. In the above situation, with four children, the farming heir could finish up with the equivalent of 100 acres and 50 cows.

Let's assume that there were 100 acres and 50 cows when the nonfarming heirs left the farm. A valid argument could be made that the three of them are each entitled to only one quarter of the 100 acres and 50 cows. That was all that was there when they chose to find fame and fortune elsewhere. They contributed nothing to the further growth of the farm while they built sizeable estates of their own.

If parents wait until the estate settlement to transfer farm assets, the farm business may not survive. Estate and inheritance taxes are almost never a problem. Building farm assets in the hands of the next farming generation as a continuous process will facilitate farm continuity.

• Transfer of farm assets. There are many ways to accomplish a smooth transfer of assets without creating taxable situations. Sometimes they might require special agreements and legal arrangements. This will be the topic to be covered next in this series of articles.

Editor's Note: This topic is also the subject of Lancaster Farming's Family Farm Transitional Seminar at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center Nov. 13.

Stonehurst Cow Tops Dairy Sale

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — A 4-year old Holstein cow acquired in August by Donald and Harold Welk was named grand champion of show and brought $7,950, top dollar at the New Holland Annual Dairy Show and Sale here Wednesday.

The Welks of Stonehurst Farm, Strasburg, purchased Southern-Manor MDL Mandy-ET at the Virginia Sale of Stars this summer. She had yet to be type-classified, according to Harold Welk.

Since then, she has been scored EX-90 for overall type with an EX-92 mammary system and is milking 105 pounds a day.

Gordon Wood of Mansfield, Tioga County, found himself bidding against a potential buyer from Kansas before finally emerging as the cow's new owner.

Mandy was sired by Lutz Meadows E Mandel-ET. Her dam, Ron-Nan Thor BG Taffy, is classified VG-88 and also boasts an excellent mammary system.

Show judge Bob Fitzsimmons commented on the champion.

"Rarely do you get the combination of a cow this good with the kind of pedigree she's got," he said.

Simmons said it was a "close call" between Mandy and the reserve champion cow, a grade Holstein brought to the sale by owner Jim Hostetter of Annville. Dennis Kolb purchased Hostetter's cow for $2,750.

The third place cow in the show, Tween Bays Becky Black Jack, went for $5,000.

About 340 dairy animals of various breeds were sold, including young heifers, springers, and bulls.

Annual Meeting To Set Direction For Statewide Farm Organization

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) will conduct its 51st annual meeting Nov. 12-14 at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

Voting delegates representing PFB's 54 county Farm Bureaus will elect leaders and set policies for the voluntary statewide farm organization.

Voting delegates will be deliberating on policy recommendations developed at the grass-roots level and forwarded from county farm bureaus. Delegates will also elect the organization's vice president and state board members representing nine of PFB's 16 districts.

PFB Vice President Carl Shaffer of Mifflinville has been nominated for re-election. State board candidates will be nominated during district caucuses at the annual meeting.

Information conferences, awards, and special events are also on the annual meeting agenda. Monday will feature conferences on "Wildlife Management," "Bringing the Classroom to Agriculture," and "Investing in Uncertain Times." A series of heath care conferences and a Heath Fair offering free or low-cost health tests will take place Tuesday morning. Conferences on agricultural promotion and agricultural education in the schools, "What Are You Waiting For?" and "Problem-Based Learning Represents Life," are set for Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday morning, respectively.

PFB will present its Young Farmer and Rancher Achievement Award and Distinguished Service to Agriculture Award during the annual meeting. The county organization with the most successful Farm Bureau programs will be recognized with the All-Star Award.

A winner in PFB's Young Farmer and Rancher Discussion Meet competition will also be decided at the annual meeting. Contestants will be judged on the basis of their ability to express ideas and opinions on preselected topics.

PFB President Guy Donaldson of Orrtanna will review highlights of the organization's programs and policy implementation achievements within the past year during the president's address at Tuesday's annual meeting luncheon.

Senator Mike Waugh, chairman of the state Senate Agriculture Committee, will address a breakfast meeting of FARMER, PFB's political action committee, on Wednesday, Nov. 14, the final day of the annual meeting.

PFB represents 28,063 farm and rural families. It is part of the nation's largest general farm organization, the five-million member American Farm Bureau Federation.

Quality Products

ficient way to offer a complete product line, they believe it is the only way they can guarantee the quality of the products they sell.

"Our local delivery customers demand products," said Bill Itle, "and we demand quality. It's part of our commitment to customer service."

The Itles believe that the quality of care their cows receive directly affects the quality of the end product. The cows are milked three times a day. They are housed in comfort freestalls bedded with sand. Jan Itle sites the sand bedding as "one of the best things we've ever done." The sand bedding has eliminated nearly every case of coliform mastitis and has improved overall udder health.

All cows get out on dirt at least once a day — one group after the morning milking and the other after evening milking. Dry cows also spend a good deal of time on grass. Valewood Farms has a regular hoof trimming schedule. In order to keep cows comfortable, they trim an average of every three months. "The whole idea is to have a contented cow," said Jan Itle. The Itles feel they should be caretakers of their animals. Everyone in the family has a role in that, as the siblings take turns milking evenings and weekends.

Longevity is also an important factor in Valewood Farms success. The cows at Valewood routinely live to be 7-8 years of age. This testifies to the quality of care and allows for additional cash flow in the form of replacements to sell. It also enables Valewood Farms to be a closed herd, another issue that the Itles feel is vital to quality assurance.

Valewood Farms recently underwent the process of becoming certified as a producer of "Free Farmed" foods. Valewood Farms is the first dairy on the East Coast authorized to use the "Free Farmed" label. It certifies that the herd is being monitored by the American Humane Association, a conservative organization committed to the "common sense" care of farm animals. The Itles believe this is a tremendous marketing tool for their products and an ideal association, as they were already doing nearly everything required to become certified.

The only change that was necessary was to cease tail docking. The Itles are confident in the mission of the American Humane Association. Unlike some organizations that use the word "humane," the American Humane Association is not a radical animal rights group. The Itles have worked with some very good people, including Dr. Brenda Coe of Penn State University, who understands the mechanics and finances of dairy farming, as well as the need to be good caretakers of the animals.

Sales manager Dan Itle sees the "Free Farmed" label as a way to set themselves apart in the market place. "We don't want to be like everyone else. We want to be different. We want to have the best products and the best service" he said.

Another aspect of the Valewood Farms that sets them apart and keeps them connected with their customers is their commitment to public education about the dairy industry. The Itle family provides leadership and support for the Cambria County Dairy Promotion program as well as the 4-H Dairy Club. Cambria County is primarily a suburban area, with little active farming and few dairy farms. The family feels that dairy farmers need to take responsibility to "bring kids in and show them where their food starts. Anyone you come in contact with as a young person, those are the ones you impact." Jan Itle said about her school tours. In October alone, Valewood hosted some 300 school children.

Last year, as a way to introduce consumers to their new dairy store, Valewood Farms hosted a Pumpkin Patch during October weekends. The event was such a success that it was brought back this year as well. During two weekends in October the area around the dairy store was turned into a pumpkin patch, with pumpkins for sale in all sizes as well as fall mums, corn stalks, Indian corn, and other fall decorations. Two highlights of the event were the pumpkin ice cream and the "corn box," a giant sand box filled with shelled corn. Visitors could see a calf up close and meet the Blair County dairy princess and the Cambria County dairy maid.

The family really enjoys getting to know their buying public. "Last week I met a man who told me he has been buying Valewood milk for 51 years. He told me how he used to get home delivery from my Dad. Now that's a sense of satisfaction and accomplishment," said Jan Itle.

Knowing that their customers are just a phone call away is a good motivation to keep their high standards of quality. It is a passion that the Itle family shares and hopes to pass down to the next generation.

"Our Dad taught us if you aren't going to do it right, don't do it," said Bill Itle. That "old-fashioned" thinking has been the key to success for Valewood Farms.

$45.2 Million To Biosecurity

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Recently, U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman announced that President Bush has proposed the allocation of $45.2 million to USDA as part of a $20 billion submission to Congress for emergency funding to strengthen essential programs and services related to biosecurity issues.

"The President's proposed emergency funding for USDA will help advance the next phase of our emergency preparedness activities and will help meet our critical infrastructure needs," said Veneman. "We have taken the appropriate steps to date to ensure the critical needs for USDA are met; however, we must remain vigilant in protecting our nation's food and agriculture."

The President's proposed allocation of $45.2 million to USDA will enhance other actions taken throughout other federal departments to increase homeland security. The funding proposed for USDA would support:

- Enhanced security for USDA facilities ($17.2 million).
- Design and construction of a satellite facility at the USDA laboratory in Ames, Iowa for research activities ($14.1 million).
- Technical assistance to state, local, federal, and private sector entities to improve biosecurity ($5.0 million).
- Education and training to strengthen response mechanisms to potential food supply threats, improve data collection and dissemination, and other biosecurity activities ($8.9 million).

Berks Farm-City

Moore was first impressed with the size of the equipment display area, then went on to describe the snowblowers, farm-related toys, and strings of lights with tractors on them, items he was surprised to find at the business.

After learning how to use the computer to sell equipment, he took the opportunity to write up a mock statement for Berks County Extension Agent Clyde Myers, who took pictures of both exchanges, for a large tractor with "lots of extras."

During his tour of the business Moore noticed the large inventory of parts, some of which are not available from John Deere dealership, and a combine engine that an employee was rebuilding. He also was introduced to several sizes of tractors, from the largest to the utility "Gator" vehicle to the antique machines.

Angstadt traveled to Bethel on October 11 to visit Moore's newspaper office. He was able to observe a planning session for editoriai content for the paper, a 40-page weekly publication.

He was also introduced to the various jobs within the paper. After trying his hand at proofreading, Angstadt concluded, "I learned at this exchange that a typographical error or misspelled word is a cardinal sin."

Angstadt also met the office manager, circulation supervisor, bill collector and advertising representative before traveling to a photo shoot at a crane company at the end of the day.

Several industry representatives or organizations were honored during the evening.

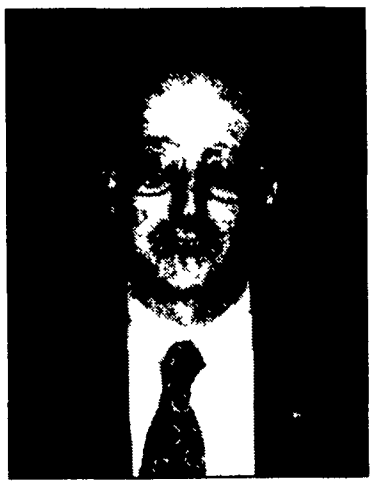
This year's Public Relations in Agriculture Award for an organization went to Berks County Agricultural Land Preservation Board.

The board, since its inception in 1992, has permanently preserved 184 farms and more than 22,000 acres of farmland. According to Victoria Kintzer, vice chairman of the board of directors who accepted the award, almost 200 farms are on the waiting list.

The program is ranked second in Pennsylvania in acres preserved and 11th in the United States. The board consists of three staff members and nine directors appointed by county commissioners. In 1999, the commissioners issued a five-year 35 million dollar bond for this program. By the end of the bond, an estimated 40,000 acres will be permanently preserved.

(Turn to Page A44)

Award-winners recognized at Berks County's Farm-City Banquet were, from left, Phoebe Bitler, William Angstadt, and Berks County Agricultural Land Preservation Board, represented by Victoria Kintzer, vice chairman of the board of directors.



Donald Angstadt, co-owner and service manager of Pikeville Equipment, was one of the exchangees.

John Moore, editor of Eastern Pennsylvania Business Journal, also participated in the exchange.

Berks Farm-City

The Public Relations in Agriculture Award for an individual went to William E. Angstadt, a businessman involved with Berks County agriculture for more than 50 years.

Angstadt spent most of his life with Reading Bone Fertilizer Company where he was an agronomist, assistant manager, manager, and owner until the company was sold in 1989. He is a past president of the Pennsylvania Plant Food Society, the Pennsylvania Inland Fertilizer Association, and a director of Penn Ag Industries. He shared his knowledge with producers at the Reading Fair, Ag Progress Days, and the Farm Show.

Phoebe Bitler was honored with the Tressie E. Caton Woman in Agriculture Award. Bitler was raising on the family diary farm which she and her husband now own and operate. She served as a Penn State extension family living agent in Berks County.

She is involved with many organizations that include an ag advisory board, Berks County Conservancy Board of Directors, Penn State Extension in Berks County Board of Directors, and the Pennsylvania and National Holstein Association.

She is a past president of the Mater Farmers Association and a past 4-H leader. She was also a spokesperson for the National Young Farmers Organization.

She and her husband, Dave, and son Jesse operate the 400-acre farm that is home to 200 head of registered Holstein cattle.

She considers her work an outgrowth of what she has learned "from childhood up — to give back something of what you have gotten."

BIRD HYBRIDS

OHIO & PENNSYLVANIA'S BEST SEED CORN

Ten Questions!
Before you begin making decisions for 2002

- How many years in the last ten did drought limit your corn yield?
- Have you been able to recover in the good years what you lost in the others?
- Are mid-western hybrids suited to your Pennsylvania soils?
- Is early vigor as important in Pennsylvania as in Iowa?
- What is REALLY more important, bushels per acre or dollars per acre?
- Are the big seed corn companies listening to you or just selling you what they have to offer in the mid-west?
- How can this year's crop affect next year's crop?
- Why are the small regional seed companies continuing to grow while the large seed/chemical mega-companies losing market share?
- Have you ever had a hand in selecting which hybrids would be offered to you in the next season?
- Would you like to hear more???

BIRD HYBRIDS!

- Drought tolerance
- Roots suited to the varied PA soils

Lancaster County Farm Woman President Talks Turkey

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

PARADISE (Lancaster Co.) — Gladys Esbenshade is best known as the Turkey Lady. She and her husband Robert own the oldest turkey farm in the nation and have the distinction of providing the annual Thanksgiving turkey to the White House.

But, today, Gladys will leave the gobble of turkeys behind while being installed as president of the Society of Farm Women of Lancaster County. The installation will take place during the society's annual convention at the Farm and Home Center, Lancaster. As president Gladys will provide leadership to 500 members and 26 county societies.

No doubt, she will "talk turkey" at the convention. According to the dictionary, talking turkey means to talk frankly and directly with the intent of accomplishing something.

Gladys plans to accentuate the positive impact Farm Women has made upon the community. Each year the organization donates thousands of dollars to local needs. But the organization isn't all fundraisers and work, it offers many types of social events and camaraderie among members. Gladys hopes to encourage others to join the organization.

Gladys became a member of Farm Women in 1952, a few years after her marriage, when she was invited to join the Society of Farm Women 14.

In those early years, Gladys always took her two young children with her to the monthly meetings, which rotated among members' homes. Gladys said that sometimes 50 members plus their children attended the meetings. She remembers members sometimes packed into three different rooms of her large farmhouse. Members from each of the three rooms could see the speaker who stood in the hallway connecting the three rooms.

The meetings provided a social outlet for women who shared the same interests of family and farm, and the program was geared to contributing to the power and influence of the farm home, contributing to community activity, and developing leadership.

Fall Foliage Fills Homegrown Arrangements

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Each year, Bedford's Fall Foliage Festival attracts thousands of visitors to the small town county seat located in the autumn decorated Allegheny Mountains.

Craftsmen offering everything from decorated shirts to homemade jellies arrive to satisfy shopping appetites from cane aided to stroller riders. There are food booths to fill the tummies of the sausage sandwich set as well as a queen contest, musical entertainment, an antique car parade, and children's fun events.

In addition to the hundreds of outside craft booths, the Bedford County Crafts Council sponsors an indoor show.

Ginny Siegfried of Imler is one of those lucky enough to make the jury and earn a spot inside the St. Thomas School Hall.

"I really like the inside," says Ginny. "The location is great, right behind the ice cream stand and near the bus stop. I don't ever have to worry about the wind or the rain."

Ginny's juried craft is unique dried arrangements made entirely from her homegrown products.

"We have 50 acres of land," says Ginny and I wanted to put it to use.

Her former proprietorship of a small dress and gift shop in the nearby town of Claysburg mixed with some experience in flower arranging gave her the idea to start her own part time arrangement sales.

"I had a friend who was president of the Bedford County Arts Council and she urged me to get juried," Ginny says.

While she sells her arrangements through her husband's pharmacy and her beauty shop,

Send Beef, Veal Contest Entries To Warm Winter Doldrums

The Pennsylvania Beef Council and Lancaster Farming are again sponsoring a beef and veal recipe contest. In contrast to 2000's summer contest, this contest will help readers combat January weather with warm wintertime beef recipes. To enter the drawing, chose a favorite recipe that includes a substantial amount of beef or veal.

This year's prizes include a full-size crock pot, a 15-piece cutlery/block set, two four-piece steak knife sets, several beef aprons, two cutting boards, three beef recipe cookbooks, two "Skinny Beef" cookbooks, one enamelware rectangular roasting pan with lid and wire rack, one oval roasting pan, one large roasting pan, a beef hat, and two instant-read thermometers.

Simply send in a favorite recipe to prepare any cut of beef or veal — please, no ground beef for this contest. Again, no ground beef recipes, please.

In addition you may write a short description on why the recipe is such a hit with your family. Lancaster Farming also welcomes one photograph of your entire family with a short caption included.

Your recipe may fall into the appetizer, soup, entree, vegetable, snack and salad categories or any other creative way to prepare and present beef and veal.

The deadline to enter recipes is Saturday, December 15. Contest winners will be printed in the January 5 issue of Lancaster Farming.

Send your entry immediately. Winners will be selected by a random drawing.

Please clearly print or type your recipe entry. Also be specific and accurate with measurements, temperatures, times, and sizes of baking dishes to use. We may disqualify entries if these guidelines are not followed.

Along with the recipe include your complete mailing address so we can send you a prize if you are a winner. Please enter one recipe per family. Contest participants must be 18 or older.

Send entries to Lou Ann Good, Lancaster Farming Beef Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 609, 1 East Main Street, Ephrata, PA 17522.

Paul Slayton, executive director of the Pennsylvania Beef Council, displays the prizes available for the upcoming beef and veal recipe contest.

Lancaster County Farm Women President Talks Turkey

Most members remain active as long as possible, but today, many are in nursing homes or have passed away and membership is dwindling. Society 14 has 29 members, but at one time the number was doubled with a waiting list for membership.

Today's busy lifestyles with many women working at off-the-farm jobs and transporting children to sporting events has cramped membership.

Participation in Farm Women-related events is so enjoyable to Gladys and other members that they are convinced that many women would enjoy participating if they would only try it.

Gladys said, "One no longer needs to wait until invited to join. Anyone who is interested in joining our group or another one should contact me (717) 687-7632."

Members do not need to live on a farm, but should be supportive of farm life.

Goals that Gladys sets for the county societies are to continue helping people and working together as a unit.

Helping Gladys with leadership are officers Phylis Newcomer, Lancaster, first vice president; Mabel Hershey, Marietta, secretary; and Eileen Bruckhart, Manheim, treasurer.

Although turkeys are relegated to the background during Gladys installation, the feathered birds will certainly move to the forefront during the remainder of the busy month on the Esbenshade farm.

This is the season when 10,000 turkeys are dressed for Thanksgiving and Christmas tables. November is also the month when school groups tour the Esbenshade turkey farm. It's Gladys that provides the tour complete with a hay ride — in which she drives the tractor.

The Esbenshades' family farm was established in 1858 and is known as the nation's oldest turkey farm.

The turkey business has a colorful history and the business has evolved over the years. Gladys said that in the beginning turkeys were raised more for their feathers than for meat. The colorful feathers were used in stylish hatwear in the day when every proper lady wore a hat when she left her home.

For many years, turkeys sported dark feathers, but today all turkeys raised on the Esbenshade farm are white.

"White turkeys are easier to dress and look nicer when finished," Gladys said.

During past generations, turkeys were expensive and traditionally served only for Thanksgiving and Christmas. But, today, turkey is considered year-round food fare, nutritious, and one of the most affordable meats.

Gladys grew up on a Millersville farm and married into the Esbenshade turkey business. At first, she and her husband lived on a neighboring farm and helped their in-laws with the turkey business. But they purchased the business and the 1858 farmstead in 1963.

Gladys became immersed in turkey care.

"In the beginning I made pets of some of them," Gladys said of her daily treks to feed the growing birds.

That stopped when she realized her next step was to dress the birds for the market.

The Esbenshades' son lives nearby and helps with holiday packing and is in charge of the chicken layer house.

The Esbenshades have two granddaughters and enjoy traveling to other countries. Gladys especially enjoyed trips to Europe.

Gladys Esbenshade and Molly the dog enjoy a romp beneath the Chinese Elm.

Gladys also serves as a leader of the Awana Club at her church and is treasurer of the Strasburg Auxiliary for Lancaster General Hospital.

Live turkeys aren't the only birds found at the Esbenshades' farmstead. Gladys friends and family members often add to her turkey collectibles.

Many people depend on traditional roast turkeys, but many cuts are available.

"We eat lots of turkey at our house," Gladys said. Here is one of her favorite recipes.

Stir-Fried Turkey Tenderloins

- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- ¼-1 pound turkey tenderloins, cut into one-inch cubes or sliced
- 1 peeled, halved, thinly sliced onion
- 1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms, optional
- 1 seeded, diced green bell pepper
- 1 cup diagonally sliced celery
- ¼ cup turkey or chicken broth or use 1 bouillon cube in ¼ cup hot water

Heat oil in a large nonstick skillet or electric frypan. Add turkey cubes or slices and stir fry two minutes or until a little brown. Add onion and mushrooms, optional, and stir fry one minute. Add remaining ingredients. Lower heat. Simmer, uncovered, stirring frequently, about 10 minutes. Makes four servings.

On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Tucking in.

A glance around the countryside telltales that we're putting the growing season — like a weary child — to bed.

Fields stripped of this year's crops sit side by side with others already planted for the next. Conditions this season have hastened the harvest to be finished well ahead of that usual late-harvest conflict: deer season.

Continuing stretches of sunny, bright, airy days dried down crops early, providing ideal conditions to keep men and equipment working well past the onset of darkness, taking advantage of the perfect weather. No lingering damp stretches, no early wet snow, no late-season hurricanes, have marred this fall of fantastic weather. Still, we all hope for needed rain.

In the meantime, farmers hustle to take advantage of every day marked by firm, dry ground to tie up loose ends before winter gets a toehold. That's kept The Farmer busy with the tractor and drill here, seeding bushels of wheat into ground where corn has been harvested for silage and high-moisture grain feed. Our goal is to have a cover of green across all the land, as a blanket of protection against soil and moisture loss.

Most years, that has been in the form of rye, fastest to grow in spring with a heavy crop of grassy tops for early silage. Rye grows so quickly in spring's cool, moist conditions that it allows only a few days of optimum harvest before getting too mature and tough for nutritious feed value. If those few days are wet ones, unfit for field work, well, too bad.

Wheat can be used in a similar way for grassy silage, but with a bit more flexibility of harvest, so that's been this year's alternative. Extra acres not needed for early silage will be left to mature and harvest for grain and straw.

Shredding equipment working in harvested fields is also commonplace during "tucking in" time, as the residue of the corn crop is battered into submission. Shredded into soft, stringy pieces, cornstalks break down their organic matter much more quickly for enriching the soil ahead of next planting.

On many farms, that corn fodder is rolled or packed into bales, providing cozy bedding material for livestock. The dry fodder provides a soft, warm, spongy sort of bedding on which livestock like to relax. When returned back to the field, bedding fodder takes with it, of course, additional rich organic materials of manure, nature's own all-natural soil enricher and fertilizer.

Most of our big round bales have been hauled in off the hillsides for winter, tucked into the barn with extras lined up and covered in the meadow below the house. Increasingly cold morning temperatures frost their tops with white crystals, reminding us that time is drawing short to finish collecting anything that remains.

That frost also signals time to tuck in the livestock housing facilities. Windows and doors of calf and heifer areas, thrown wide for summer ventilation, are reclosed and reinstalled against blustery wind and dropping temperatures. Big doors on the ends of the dairy barn are pulled partially closed with increasing frequency, and the north-side windows get a few handle-cranks toward closure. Balmy afternoons send us scooting around re-cranking windows and pushing doors to keep the barn from getting stuffy. Surely, it must look like we can't make up our minds.

Part of our "tucking in " is turning out.

Green cover planted early has grown tall enough to use for fresh grazing, much to the delight of the "girls." Secured by temporary fence strung about the perimeters of the hillside, we turn out into fresh grass our mature, matronly cows. They react like baby calves, racing up the gentle hillside, kicking their heels with glee. Before they can stop and begin actually eating the grass, the whole group must race around and check all the fence corners for weak spots. Once fencing perimeters are established, they settle down and happily munch away.

As with tucking in a weary child at night, we keep a close eye on the "tuckee," hoping for a blanket of insulation to settle over the fields, offering them a snug, undisturbed, winter's sleep.

Like most parental guardians at day's end, we're relieved to see it go to sleep for a bit. And will be ready to embrace it again, happily and with renewed vigor, when it once again awakes.

Homegrown Arrangements

as well as out of her home, the largest volume of sales comes from the annual Fall Foliage Festival.

Ginny's work begins early in the spring with planting. "We grow everything from seed," Ginny says. She and her husband, Earl, plant 50 acres of every imaginable kind of gourd. They also plant Indian corn, Indian fingers, small pumpkins, sunflowers, sweet Annie, and broom corn. "I can hardly wait until the seed catalogues arrive each spring," she admits.

"Broom corn and, new for us this year, bloody butcher, are both very difficult to grow," she says. "But with great care, we have had success with both and are proud of our results."

Both require that the ground be warm, therefore, running the risk of not having the plant ready for the festival. Seeds must be planted " deep and have to be planted individually.

"We plant, irrigate, weed, and then I still have to make the arrangements."

In order to keep prices reasonable, Ginny looks at yard sales for receptacles. "I buy wooden boxes, glass vases, baskets, or inexpensive flower pots."

"I've done broom corn arrangements in old barrels and even used old chairs."

Because it is a juried show, every arrangement must be original. "I can't sell the gourds individually," she explains.

Her inventory for each week of the two week festival includes 35 baskets of gourd arrangements and ten to 12 other dried arrangements.

"I spend anywhere from 15 minutes to a half hour on each arrangement," Ginny says.

"Each basket is 'you' the customer. I want it to be as perfect as possible. I am very fussy about my materials. If a gourd has a hole, I throw it away because it might be a worm hole."

As she and her husband pick their floral produce, they load them into a wagon, which is pulled in front of the house. Each sunny day from early September until time for the festival, I spend my afternoons making dried arrangements," Ginny says. "I walk around and around the wagon looking for just the right piece."

"I have been known to make one arrangement two or three times. If it doesn't look to me like something I would want to buy, I tear it apart and start over."

Ginny finds that each year, people look for something different and that is what is popular one year might not be the next.

"But, it gives me great satisfaction when I get a repeat customer. One lady drove 3 and hours to come to the festival and she and her friend spent more then $200 at my booth.

"I don't paint or sew, but wish I could," Ginny emphasizes. "However, I do think that gardening is also an art and knowing what to do with the finished product is a big plus."

"It's a lot of work, but seeing my satisfied customers makes it all worthwhile."

"However, I could never do it without the support of my husband. He's wonderful!"

Consuming Thoughts

When it comes to picking healthful choices, the squash family is a great bunch! This colorful clan packs a powerful punch of potassium, fiber, vitamin C and carotenoids. Carotenoids, the building blocks for vitamin A, appear to be a natural cancer-protector. Most health experts recommend eating more dark green and deep yellow fruits and vegetables to get more of this important nutrient. All squashes are low in calories and sodium, too, perfect for dieters and those watching their sodium intake.

Fall is a great time to enjoy taste sweet and mild taste of winter squash. They also may be stored for several months if stored in a dry, well-ventilated area at room temperature. Keep in mind that two pounds of peeled, trimmed squash makes about 4 cups when cooked. Here's a quick guide to help you pick squash for your family. (Although the flavors differ, you can substitute one type of winter squash for another).

Acorn squash is wide-ribbed, slightly oval and pointed at one end. The dark green shell changes to orange in storage. Acorn squash is sweet, dry and firm. It is good with sweet, nutty or spicy stuffing.

Banana squash is large, long and cylindrical, pointed at both ends. The moderately thick, pale gray to creamy white shell can be smooth or somewhat wrinkled.

Buttercup squash is cylindrically shaped with a thick neck, bulbous base, smooth creamy brown shell and deep orange flesh. It has a buttery, sweet taste and can be stuffed, glazed, or used in stews; it is also great for purees. It cooks more quickly than other hard-shell squash.

Chayote squash can be round or pear-shaped with a green rind that may be smooth, ribbed or covered with smooth white to dark green spines. It tastes like a cross between an apple and a cucumber. It can be baked, steamed or boiled.

Hubbard squash has as many good uses as it does colors. Ranging from gold to blue-gray to green, this dry-textured, sweet, nutty squash tastes terrific in soups, purees and desserts.

Pumpkin squash, synonymous with Halloween, is a sweet orange squash that tastes super in breads and muffins, or even baked or broiled. Don't throw away the seeds-you can roast them for munchies.

Spaghetti squash is a sweet, mild variety that can be used just like pasta. Season it with red or white sauce, or try a little garlic and olive oil.

Squash Suggestions:

• Mash cooked squash with a dash of hot-pepper sauce and minced onion for spicy taste.

• Simmer cubes of butternut squash into beef stew for variety.

• Puree cooked winter squash simmers into chill-chasing soups.

• Cut acorn squash into rings and remove the seeds and stringy fibers. Place the rings in a single layer in a large, shallow baking dish and cover with fresh orange juice. Stream MAPS of Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Michigan and New England (CT, MA, VT, HR, RI)

Why every fisherman and boater needs these maps

It is estimated that 10% of all the anglers catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into - there's a sure way to up your odds - simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few ever fish.

Pennsylvania is loaded with great fishing waters - many of them overlooked. From Lake Erie tributaries to the Delaware River ...thousands of miles of streams, lakes and rivers are now easy-to-locate on one map.

Professor Higbee's Stream Map of Pennsylvania is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind.

This 3-foot-by-5-foot color map shows virtually all of the 45,000 miles of Pennsylvania streams plus lakes.

Professor Higbee's STREAMS

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3x5 map.

The map sold extremely well – until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

RAVE REVIEWS

"It is amazingly detailed and names some creeks in the Mohawk Valley that can't even be found on topographic maps."
- John Pitarres, OBSERVER-DISPATCH-Utica

"If you're looking for the most definitive maps ever created depicting every single creek, river, stream, pond and lake...then "Professor Higbee's Stream Maps" are without question the finest."
- Howard Brant, THE NEWARK STAR-LEDGER

"It is in showing where to find out-of-the-way trout streams that makes the map such a treasure to the fisherman."
- Joe Gordon, TRIBUNE-DEMOCRAT-Johnstown

Deer Hunting: Understanding The Sport

Deer season, it is soon here.

The "real" hunters have already been visiting the woods staking out the best spots, looking for tracks and rubs. Hunting started with the basic need for food, clothing, and tools. Today it has become a science. Getting just the right deer stand is as important as selecting the right bow or rifle. Thousands of dollars are spent in hopes of one prize catch.

I've been around baseball and football fans, but their love of those sports pales to that of deer hunters for their sport. It takes dedication to get up at 4 a.m. or earlier, sit in a tree stand or kneel on damp ground for hours until an animal with a white tail comes grazing or charging through the woods. Forget the fact that it may be cold, raining or snowing. Hunters do this for weeks often without getting to take aim even at one animal.

In trying to understand what drives thousands of men and women to the woods, I came up with a tongue and cheeks list of the top five most popular reasons (also stealing the idea from Letterman):

5. Camouflage color matches my skin tone.

4. The in-laws are visiting this week.

3. The only way I know to get out of raking leaves.

2. Love the exhilaration of hauling a 200-pound dead animal through brush and uphill in freezing rain, and the

1. Reason. There's nothing better than being in a cabin with five other guys who haven't showered for three days.

But all kidding aside, hunting is a serious sport and can be a very dangerous one. It is important that every hunter, regardless of experience, review all safety precautions. It is also critical that all food safety guidelines be followed.

The following suggestions are from the brochure "Proper Care and Handling of Venison From Field to Table" a free publication by Penn State Cooperative Extension, an equal opportunity university:

- Clean your knife frequently to avoid dragging bacteria into the meat.
- If the organs smell offensive or exhibit greenish discharge, black blood, or blood clots in the muscle, do not consume meat from the carcass.
- After washing the cavity, wipe it with paper towels and prop the cavity open with a clean stick to aid in air circulation.
- Get the carcass temperature down to 40°F as soon as possible.

For additional, detailed information, call your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office and request "Proper Field Dressing and Handling of Wild Game and Fish" and "Proper Care and Handling of Venison From Field to Table."

If It's Warm, Hunters Must Be Extra Cautious With Meat

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — With deer hunting seasons occurring earlier in the fall and warm weather likely, it is more important than ever for hunters to handle meat properly, according to a Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences food safety expert.

"Successful hunters should exercise added caution this year if they encounter higher outdoor temperatures," says Catherine Cutter, extension food safety specialist. "Warmer conditions have the potential to cause more food-borne illness, especially when hunters improperly handle or process their deer."

Cutter has developed a comprehensive program to arm hunters and others with important information on wild game food safety. The centerpiece is a set of five free publications addressing proper care and handling of wild game, fish and birds.

"With over a million licensed hunters in the state, many people rely on game meat to sustain them through the winter — especially in rural areas," says Cutter, an assistant professor of food science. "But game animals — especially deer — are known to carry E. coli and game birds can carry Salmonella. Since cleaning, dressing and butchering often are done in the field, airborne contaminants, weather, temperature and other factors can affect meat safety."

E. coli 0157:H7 and Salmonella are harmful bacteria found in the intestinal tracts of game, livestock, poultry and other animals. These pathogens can cause gastrointestinal distress in humans and can be fatal to young children and older adults.

"Individual pamphlets on game birds, fish, and venison provide hunters and fishers basic information on what to do in the field to keep pathogens and bacterial growth down," Cutter explains. "Two longer booklets expand on the information in the pamphlets and elaborate on field dressing procedures for specific animals, with instructions on how to make sausages or jerky."

The series includes these titles:

- Venison identifies tools and utensils hunters should carry, in addition to tips on field dressing, transporting and kitchen processing.
- Fish presents safety guidelines for before and after the catch. Topics include transporting, processing and tips for smoking and freezing.
- Game Birds suggests the proper tools to take when hunting, as well as tips on field dressing, removing feathers and aging meat.
- Proper Field Dressing And Handling Of Wild Fish And Game, a 10-page booklet, explains the crucial first steps in field dressing and butchering fish and game immediately after harvest. Diagrams illustrate techniques for deer and other large animals, as well as small game, wild turkey, waterfowl and fish.
- Proper Processing Of Wild Game And Fish, an 18-page booklet, describes the preparation of venison, birds, fish and other game after it's brought in from the field. Sections include the importance of temperature in controlling spoilage; butchering and cutting; differences between aging, curing and smoking; canning game; and recipes for jerky and sausages.

Single copies of the wild game meat safety series are available free of charge by contacting your county Penn State Cooperative Extension office, or by calling the College of Agricultural Sciences Publication's Distribution Center at (814) 865-6713.

Pizza Crust

1 cup bean flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon maple sugar
¼ teaspoon xanthan gum
2 teaspoons baking powder
6 ounces water
1 tablespoon olive oil
Italian seasonings may be added if desired

In a bowl, mix dry ingredients, bean flour, salt, xanthan gum, and baking powder. In another bowl, beat water and oil. Add to the dry mixture and mix well. Let it set 3 minutes. Take a cookie sheet lightly coated with vegetable oil and spoon out 4 tablespoons mix to form a 6-inch pizza crust. To smooth out the crust, dip the spoon in water and use it to spread the batter. Bake in a 350 degree preheated oven for approximately 10-15 minutes until slightly golden brown. Then, using a spatula, flip it over on the other side and bake for approximately 5 minutes until golden brown. Remove from oven, put toppings on such as tomato sauce, vegetables, cheese, etc, and place back in the oven at 450 degrees for 3 minutes to melt cheese. Remove from oven when cheese is bubbling and slice. To reheat, place on rack at 350 degrees for 10 minutes and not on a cookie sheet.

1 cup semi-sweet chocolate pieces
½ cup chopped walnuts

Cream shortening, sugars, egg, and vanilla; beat until fluffy. Stir together flours, baking powder, and salt. Blend well into creamed mixture. Stir in chocolate and nuts. Drop on greased cookie sheet and bake in 375 degree oven until done. Remove from sheet immediately.

Favorite Granary Loaf

½ cup whole almonds, with skins
½ cup corn flour
½ cup tapioca flour
½ cup potato starch flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon xanthan gum powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup plain yogurt, low-fat or regular
½ cup water
1 egg
2 tablespoons corn oil
1 tablespoon dark molasses

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Grease loaf pan with butter.

Place almonds and corn flour in the bowl of a food processor and grind until a fine meal is formed, the flour will prevent the nuts from turning oily.

Add the tapioca flour, potato starch, baking powder, baking soda, xanthan gum, and salt; and process to mix well.

In a small bowl, mix the yogurt, water, egg, corn oil, and molasses together.

With the motor running, add the liquid ingredients through the feed tube and process just long enough to combine. Check the batter; it should be puffy looking and able to hold its shape on a spoon. (If necessary, add a little more water or brown rice flour if the batter looks too thick or too moist). Using a rubber spatula, transfer the batter into prepared pan. Smooth the top with the spatula and cut a trench down the center, which will help the bread to rise evenly. Bake until well browned and crusty, 40-45 minutes. Turn out and let cool on a wire rack.

Making Flavored Vinegars

A decorative decanter filled with a few springs of herbs and vinegar provides eye appeal whether sitting on the window sill or being used by the cook. Specialty food products also make nice gifts.

While flavored vinegars are easy to make, certain precautions should be taken to have a safe product. Use glass containers that have been sterilized 10 minutes in boiling water. Scald lids and caps. If using cork, use new pre-sterilized corks. Use high quality herbs. Wash gently and blot dry on paper towels. Herbs can be dipped in a sanitizing solution of 1 teaspoon household chlorine bleach in 6 cups water then rinsed and patted dry. Thoroughly wash fruits in clean water. Leave small fruits whole. Allow 1-2 cups of fruit per pint of vinegar. Be aware that wine and rice vinegar contain some protein that provides an excellent medium for bacterial growth. Store flavored vinegar in the refrigerator for best retention of flavor and freshness. Vinegar should keep for up to three months in cool storage and six to eight months refrigerated.

If mold, bubbling, cloudiness, or sliminess develop, throw it away without using or tasting. Vinegars displayed on the window sill or shelf as a decoration for more than a few weeks should be considered permanent decorations and not used in foods.

What is the best way to keep the herbs looking nice in a flavored vinegar? Place the herbs into sterilized glass jars and then pour vinegar that has been heated to 190-195 degrees Fahrenheit over the herbs in the bottle. Heating herbs in the vinegar causes them to wilt more.

How long does it take for vinegar to reach the desired flavor? It depends upon the strength of the flavoring ingredient and your individual taste preference. Gently shake the container each day to mix flavors. After three or four days taste. When it tastes good to you, it is done. Fruit infusions generally take longer to reach the desired flavor.

Should the herbs be removed from the vinegar? After the desired flavor is reached, the vinegar can be filtered and returned to a sterilized jar or the vinegar can be used without filtering.

What type of vinegar works best? Although any vinegar will work, distilled white vinegar is best because of its clear color, it is the least expensive, and it is versatile to use with many spices, herbs, and fruits.

Apple cider vinegar has a milder flavor but the amber color may not be as desirable with lighter colored herbs. The delicate flavor of wine vinegar provides a good foundation for fruit infused vinegar.

How much of an herb should be added? Use one to four sprigs of fresh herbs or two to three tablespoons dried herbs for each pint of vinegar.

Can flavored oils be made in the same way that flavored vinegars are made? It is not recommended because herbs, garlic, onions, peppers, etc. are low-acid foods and can support the growth of bacteria.

Surrounding these low-acid foods with oil creates an oxygen-free environment that is perfect for the growth of bacteria and formation of its toxin. Commercial oil mixtures are acidified or contain other microbial inhibitors to prevent bacterial growth. It is recommended that flavored oils be made fresh when desired, kept in the refrigerator and used within three days or less of refrigerator storage.

Here are some flavoring combinations to try.

• Lemon-Dill-Peppercorn Vinegar: For each pint of distilled white vinegar to be flavored, use the spiral peel (colored part only) of 1 lemon, 4 sprigs of fresh dill, and one teaspoon whole black peppercorns. This is especially good in marinades for fresh seafood or salad dressings.

• Spicy Parsley Vinegar: For each pint of distilled white vinegar to be flavored, use 3 to 4 sprigs of fresh parsley, one teaspoon whole mustard seed, and one teaspoon whole allspice.

Flavored vinegars are fun and easy to make, according to Martha Zepp, Lancaster County extension.

• Herbal-Mix Vinegar: For each pint of distilled white or wine vinegar to be flavored, make a bouquet from 3 sprigs each of fresh parsley, rosemary, and thyme. Lightly crush herbs before placing in jars.

• Fresh Tarragon Vinegar: For each pint of distilled white or white wine vinegar to be flavored, use three sprigs of fresh tarragon or one cup of fresh tarragon leaves and stems. Lightly crush before placing in jars. A variation of this is to add ⅓ cup minced fresh chives to each pint of vinegar, along with the tarragon.

+p A basic vinaigrette can be prepared with two parts oil to one part flavored vinegar for a milder flavor or one to one for more tartness.

• Try sprinkling vinegar on steamed vegetables, fresh salad greens like Swiss chard or spinach, or broiled fish.

• For an unusual fruit dip, mixed fruited vinegar with yogurt and honey. Drizzle berry flavored vinegar over pears poached with brown sugar for a sweet-tart dessert.

Use these flavored vinegars with salads and vegetables. However you use them, flavored vinegars add elegance and excitement to special dishes. Note that flavored vinegars should not be used as brining solutions in canning recipes.

Smart Stuff

with Twig WalkingStick

Dear Twig:
What's organic farming?

Organic farming, or "biological farming," doesn't use synthetic pesticides or fertilizers. Instead, the soil is enriched with manure, compost and cover crops. And pests, weeds and diseases are fought or prevented with a big bag of mostly non-chemical tools: resistant varieties, rotation, cultivation, mulch and more. (There are a few organic pesticides.)

Organic matter in the soil — from manure, compost, etc. — is the key. It's full of nutrients that make crops grow. It helps the soil hold nutrients and moisture. And it supports all sorts of organisms — billions of them, from microbes to earthworms — whose actions, ideally, keep crops healthy.

Farmers who grow organically say they do it to help the environment (to reduce chemical exposure and increase biodiversity), to cut their input costs (manure, for example, is cheap or free) and to boost, they hope, their profitability (organic crops sell for more than their conventional counterparts).

But organic farming takes a lot of work. Yields may vary or be lower, because some crops are hard to grow without chemicals. And the cost to consumers is higher. So it's not for everyone.

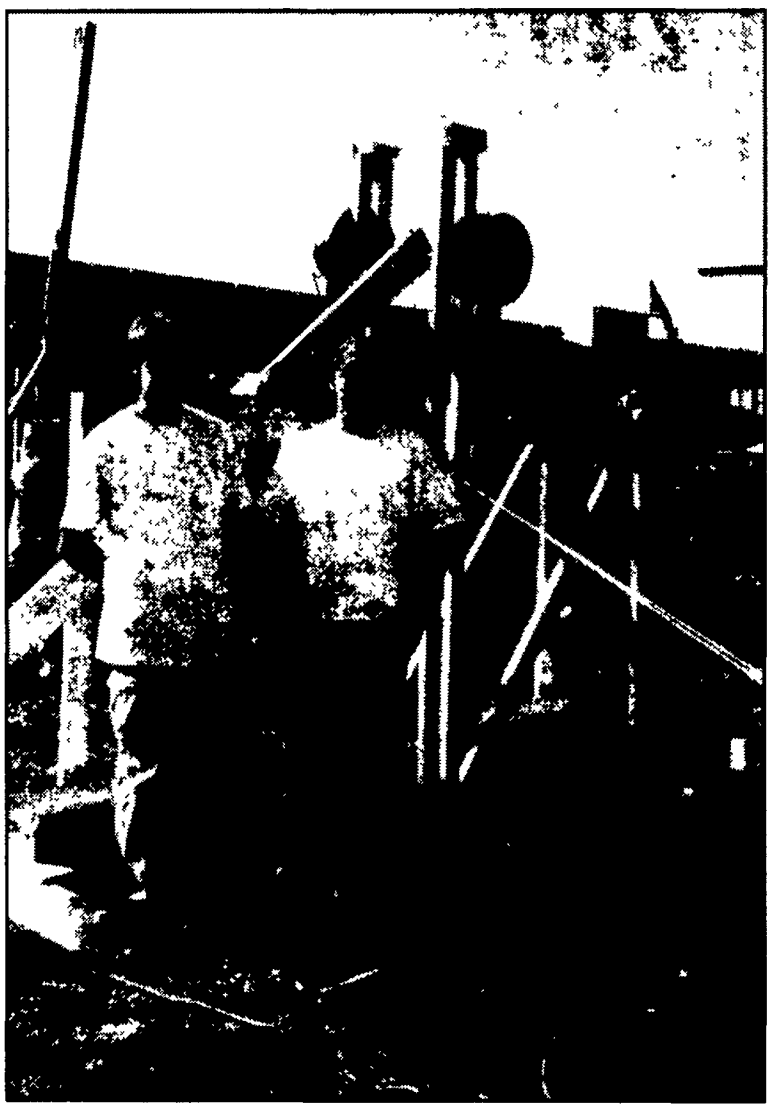
After a long day competing at the Centre County Grange Fair, Dustin Fleck and his calf Quazo take a well-deserved snooze. Dustin, 9, is the son of Tim and Karen Fleck of Fairbrook Farms, Pennsylvania Furnace.



Team members Whipper Snappers from Eastern York High School finished first in the high school division with a toss of 88 feet.

Lancaster Society 18

Lancaster Society of Farm Women Society 18 conducted a meeting with Elizabeth Diem as hostess, Pat Lueck had devotions with readings about the many facets of friendships. A friend is a priceless gift you give to yourself in time of need, but a true friend at all times. Fourteen members answered roll call by telling of an event someone has done something for her that was very special.

The program was a study of the life of butterflies. Her examples are all on display under a glass which plant material showed many species. We heard of the four stages from egg to larva to pupa to the emergence of a beautiful exact coloration of its species. The color is formed by an enormous number of tiny scales and the names are very descriptive of the color patterns. Butterflies are found all over the world. They sometimes gather together on one tree in countless numbers.

The business meeting discussed attendance at the county convention to be conducted at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center on Nov. 3. The November meeting will be at the home of Roberta Shepherdson, 80 Brandt Boulevard, Landisville.

Statewide Grangers' Project Benefits Blair County Agencies

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — More than 600 members of the Pennsylvania State Grange converged on the city of Altoona for the 129th Session of the Pennsylvania State Grange. The annual convention not only benefited the organization and the local economy but two non-profit organizations received a welcomed donation.

Children and Youth Services and The Family Resource Center, both of Blair County, were recipients of 263 brand new blankets and 2,112 new and used books collected throughout the state.

"We always leave something positive behind in the county that has hosted our state convention," said Janet Pratt, who with her husband, Michael, serve as co-chairs of Community Service for the organization.

"We like to reach out to the community," he said. "This year, we have hundreds of blankets and all sorts of books. We have some classics and books for all age levels."

According to the Pratts, the response to the statewide project among the Grangers has been overwhelming. Books and blankets have come from all corners of the state.

Robert Ritchey, a caseworker for Children and Youth Services of Blair County, accepted the gifts on behalf of his organization.

"The agency appreciates the Grange's effort. The items will be used and appreciated," he said.

Cate Trimble is director of the Family Resource Center. She said, "The items will be given to the families we work with, especially the needier families. Keeping children safe and warm and promoting literacy is our goal.

We encourage parents to read to their children."

"It is so nice that this organization gets together and wants to do something for the community they come together in," Trimble said.

The Pennsylvania State Grange is a grassroots organization with 20,000 members in 400 chapters across the Commonwealth. It is dedicated to improving the lives of rural Pennsylvania through legislative action, grassroots initiatives, community service and by offering member services like financial planning, a credit union and insurance programs.

Pennsylvania State Grange Community Services co-chairs Janet and Michael Pratt, Ruth Vonada of Penns Valley Grange, Centre County; Joyce Snyder of Valley Grange, York County; and Ruth Ann Kensigner of Lincoln Grange, Huntingdon County help prepare the 2,112 books collected by Grange members for Children and Youth Services and The Family Resource Center, both of Blair County. In addition to the books, 263 brand new blankets were distributed to the two organizations.

Bucks County Granger Wins State Talent Show

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — Sharon Kimmel, Wrightstown, captured first place honors in the Talent Festival at the 129th Session of the Pennsylvania State Grange held in Altoona. Her rendition of "You Light Up My Life" earned a spot in the National Grange competition scheduled for November 16 in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Kimmel is a member of Grange # 684.

"For so many years, I sang and played on my own for my own entertainment," Kimmel said. "Last year I entered the competition and played my own music. I took third at states. This year, for the first time I used an accompanist. Someone recommended that I use an accompanist so I could reach out to the audience better."

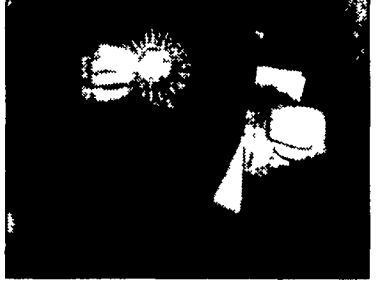
The advice paid off. Kimmel was able to capture her local and regional competition paving the road to the Iowa competition.

"My accompanist was Eleanor Atkinson of Middletown Grange," she said. "This was her first time as an accompanist. I think she really did a great job. I really appreciate her doing this for me."

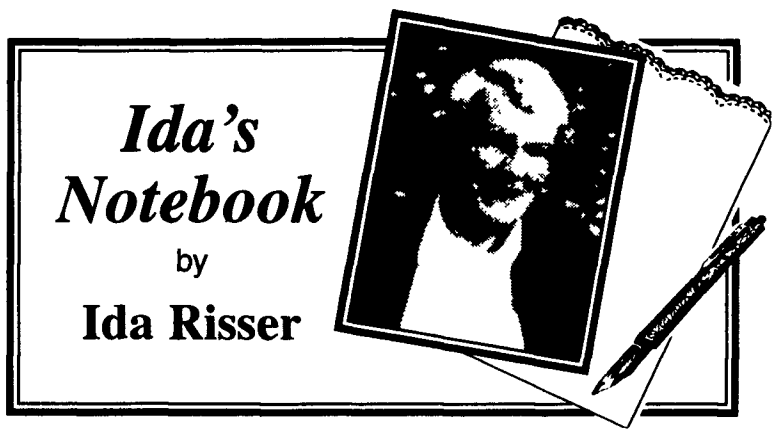
Kimmel has been a Grange member since 1979. She first joined Edgewood Grange and approximately seven years ago she transferred to Middletown Grange.

"I'm very excited and proud to represent Middletown Grange # 684 and the Pennsylvania State Grange at Nationals," she said.

"I love the Grange. It means a lot to me. It is a wonderful organization."



Grange talent winner Sharon Kimmel of Wrightstown, took first place honors at the 129th session of the Pennsylvnaia State Grange with her rendition of "You Light Up My Life." She will travel to the National Grange competition scheduled for November 16 in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.



It is hard to believe but it is 10 years since we moved into our new log house. It is very snug in winter as the sun pours in the two bay windows.

In our previous house, an 1813 one, we often had trouble with ladybugs and box elder bugs getting in at windows in the fall. But, this house is very tight and so they just gather on the outside.

We recently trimmed some shrubbery as it was overgrown. The holly at our front porch has a lot of red berries that we can use for decoration. We trimmed the dogwood tree and the Judas tree too.

My saffron bulbs, which bloom in October, have only a few blooms. However, our daughter sent me several containers of saffron for flavoring food and so I just enjoy their lavender blooms.

Our church recently held a meal to raise money to buy Christmas gifts for disadvantaged children. Some of the girls and boys visited our church and sang for us. The men of the church cooked the meal and it was quite tasty.

The travelogue that we saw on Saturday was on the Blue Ridge Mountains in four states. Interspersed with the scenery were many scenes of Civil War reenactments, kayaking, Scottish games, and large caverns. Many places were familiar to us as we've visited there previously.

This year our black walnut trees had a lot of nuts. Many fall on the road and they crack loudly as cars drive over them. Some years my husband picked up bags and bags of them, but this year neighbors will use them. There is even someone who comes in a small truck and picks them up out of the field and then quickly leaves. He could have a lot more if he would only ask us for them.

Wildlife Artifacts, Mounts Attract Collectors At Auctions

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

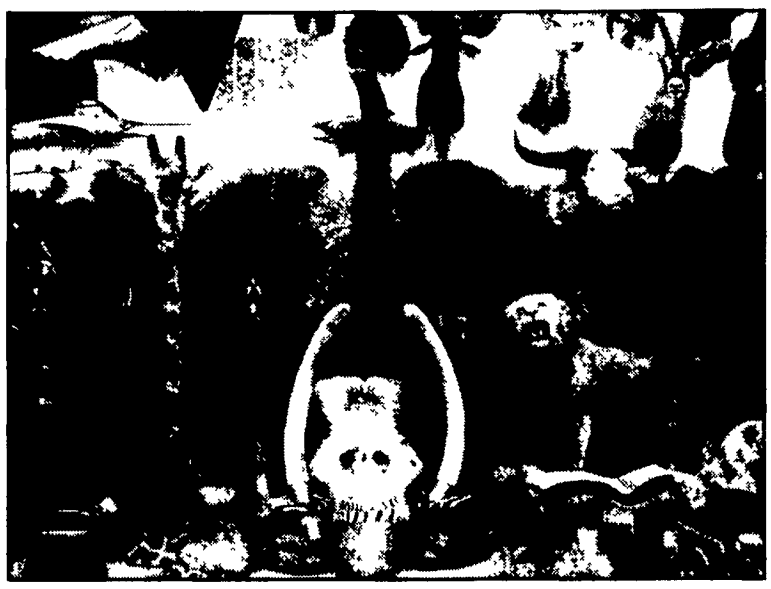
EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — If you think that mounted bear in your neighbor's house is his hunting trophy, guess again.

Spectacular mounted giraffes, bears, white-tailed deer, and even an elephant are available for bid. And, many hunters seek out these finds to add to their own private collections.

Hundreds of mounts from around the world attract collectors. But not all the bidders are hunters, some are in search of museum pieces, and some are interior designers creating the lodge decor for clients. Many restaurants and offices also select mounts to hang. Sporting good stores are always in search of mounts to attract customers' attentions.

"The lodge look is big in the midwest," said Amy Peterson, a spokesperson for Fin, Fur, and Feather Wildlife Museum and Taxidermy Auction, Haneyville.

When Frank Lolli Sr. started a livestock auction selling ponies, horses, and cattle in 1947, his business plan did not specify branching out to include fin, fur, and feather mounts and wildlife artifacts.



Rare, exotic animals such as elephant or lion mounts or skulls, tusks, and feet are some of the artifacts that come from such countries as Africa, Nepal, Peru, and Australia.

But that's exactly what evolved when the auction was taken over by his four sons, Jim, Dominic, Frankie, and Tim.

In the early 1980s, the brothers started selling exotic animals and in 1990 they began selling taxidermy mounts and artifacts.

Museum liquidations and individual collections are often sources the Lolli family pursues in search of tigers, ponies, horses, cattle, and kangaroos.

Record book mounts are measured and scored by the Safari Club International.

Some of the hottest items are the Boone and Crockett white-tailed mounts, which is a method of scoring. The bigger the rack, the higher the score. Collectors often want a series of the Boone and Crockett mounts to add to their collections.

Quality hides are determined by the taxidermy work. If the hair falls out, it is not a quality piece. On the other hand, taxidermists sometimes purchase damaged or surplus hides or mounts to restore. Mounts and hides should be kept out of sunlight and humidity. The average mount should last at least 40 years, and if well cared for, much longer.

Peterson said that a full body giraffe sells between $7,000-$9,000 and an elephant head and shoulders between $12,000-$15,000. Scores determine the prices of Boone and Crockett white-tailed mounts, averaging about $8,000. But the biggest buck killed in the state of Montana brought a bid of $22,000.

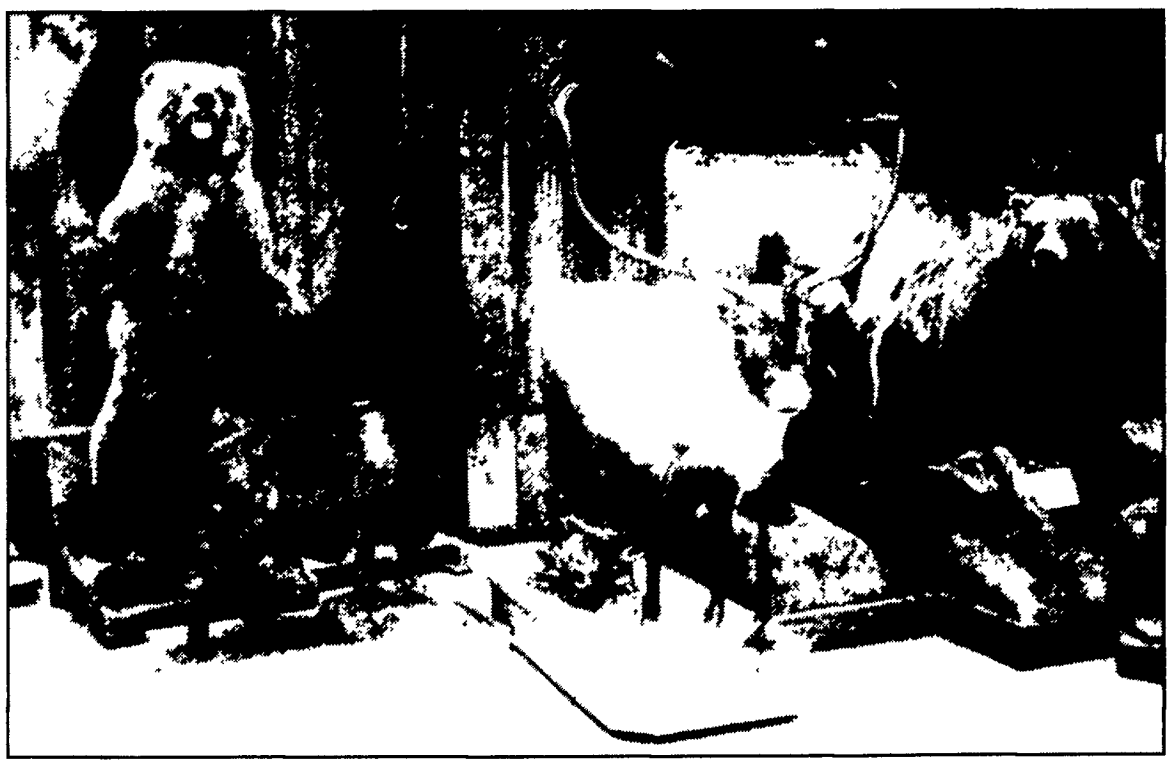
Government regulations are in place to protect endangered species so that animals are not killed for hides or mounts. Endangered species mounts must have been killed before 1972, and if sold, the mount is not allowed to leave the state.

Peterson explained that these laws limit buyers and knock out the market so that poaching has no monetary value.

Lolli Sales, located in Macon, Mo., offer two auctions annually in different states. One auction was conducted recently at Haneyville, six miles north of Waterville on Rt. 44. More than 2,000 mounts were auctioned.

"If someone is looking for a specific type of mount, we can usually locate or will have it on hand," Peterson said.

African mounts include a Cape buffalo, full body Bongo, and a Nile Lechwe.



Several full-body North American mounts include a brown bear, a black bear, a caribou, and wolf.

Cast Line Into Stress-Reducing World Of Aquarium Fish

Aquarium fish may be the latest stress-reducing, calming and decorating trend in offices, schools and medical facilities, according to the American Pet Products Manufacturers Association (APPMA), the nation's leading not-for-profit pet trade association that educates consumers about the health benefits associated with pet ownership.

From children's classrooms to office cubicles and dentists' offices to nursing homes, aquariums filled with colorful fish and inventive accessories are making a splash helping students, workers and patients relieve daily stress levels and improve creativity.

"The soothing motion of swimming, vibrant-colored fish make a fish tank mesmerizing to viewers. There are many therapeutic health benefits that come with watching an aquarium," commented Funda Alp, spokesperson for APPMA. "Viewing aquarium fish is relaxing and has been proven to reduce anxiety levels."

According to APPMA, fish work! In fact:

- Keeping an aquarium in an office or cubicle contributes to a more creative work environment and provides relief from everyday pressures.
- Aquarium fish displayed in a doctor's office creates a peaceful atmosphere and helps patients to be less anxious while waiting for their appointment. Fish also capture children's attention and keep them occupied until the doctor is ready to see them.
- Alzheimer's Disease patients are better able to relax, focus and finish meals in the presence of an aquarium. Studies show those suffering from the disease are calmer and better able to perform day-to-day tasks after viewing fish in an aquarium.
- Along with reducing anxiety levels, aquariums placed in classrooms can be learning tools for students. Caring for fish teaches children responsibility, educates them about proper pet care and improves schoolwork in areas including math, science and creative writing.

APPMA's 2001-2002 National Pet Owners Survey revealed that nearly 13 million households in the U.S. own aquarium fish. Because aquarium fish are easy to maintain, they make ideal companions for the workplace and school environments.

Former Farm Bureau Employees Meet To Remember The Past

ONO (Lebanon Co.)— It was the second Wednesday in October and true to tradition, nearly 50 persons, not prompted by any invitation, showed up at the Farmer's Wife Restaurant here to lunch together and talk about the way things used to be down on the farm.

For the past 25 years, more or less, former employees of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, have come from many areas in the state to Lebanon County two times each year— on the second Wednesday in October and in April — to keep in touch with each other as well as to remember the past. In addition to Lebanon and Lancaster, among the counties represented are Indiana, Westmoreland, Lehigh, Adams, Dauphin, and Perry.

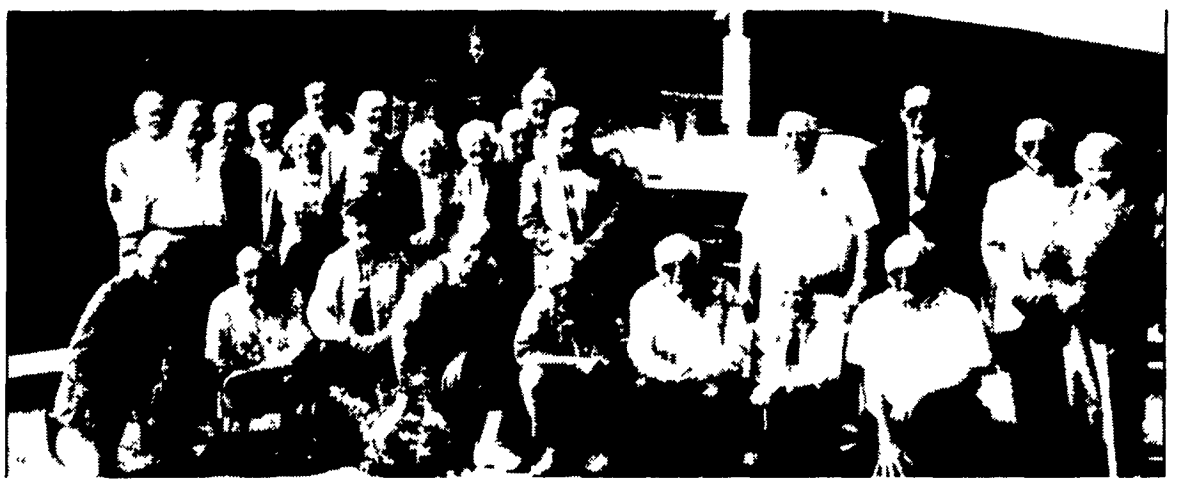
Floyd Imes of Manheim, who was manager of the Farm Bureau's seed plant, said that the luncheon meetings were started by Jerome Hutter of Lebanon. Hutter who is now deceased, was a former employee in the Bureau's machinery division. No written invitations were ever issued, according to Imes, "Just by word of mouth by former employees to other former employees, members come," he noted.

At the October meeting, there were two restored tractors on display at the meeting site, courtesy of Jerome Hutter's son Floyd, who has started to restore some aging tractors. Discussion at this meeting centered on the tractors and the machinery division which was started by the Pa. Farm Bureau in the early 1940s.

Until the 1960s when it was discontinued, the machinery division distributed tractors in the 33 counties served by the Bureau, according to Imes. The tractors were manufactured by the Cockshutt Farm Machinery Company in Brantford, Ontario, Canada.

Floyd Hutter now owns the first tractor #34 delivered to the Pa. Farm Bureau's machinery division's manager (at the time) Ed Newlin, who is deceased. Tractor #34 with the co-op name is not yet restored and was on display for the former employees to reminiscence about, along with the restored Golden Arrow, one of 100 manufactured and one of 44 whose whereabouts are known.

According to Imes, during the Farm Bureaus's distribution era, the tractors had three names. The original name was Co-op and the color was orange. The second name was Blackhawk, colored yellow and trimmed in red; and the third was called Cockshutt and was red.



Ex-Pennsylvania Farm Bureau employees who met recently to remember the past are: Left to right, front kneeling: Enos Heisey, Lebanon area; John Zimmerman, Jonestown; Bill Seaman, Lebanon; Jesse Smith, Enola; Glenn Yoder, Zionsville; Kit Coleman, Harrisburg; Jim Dourborow, Harrisburg; and Bob Parmer, Grantville. Standing: John Keesey, Palmyra; Henry Nixon, Palmyra; Bob Sowerbrower, Mechanicsburg; Gus Pellas, Orefield; Bill Lytle, Lebanon; Esther Overgaard, Lancaster; Laura Feehrer, Harrisburg; Dave Bowman, Palmyra; Stiney Thompson, Summerdale; Floyd Imes, Manheim; John Korman, Mechanicsburg; Jay Irwin, Lancaster, retired Lancaster County extension agent; Charlie Rohrbaugh, Gettysburg; James Waters, Gettysburg; Clara Sowerbrower, Mechanicsburg; and Floyd Hutter, on a restored Cockshutt tractor, the kind which were sold by the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's machinery division from the early 1940s to the early 1960s.

Imes recalled that a Blackhawk tractor was presented to Pres. Dwight D. Eisenhower when he purchased his farm at Gettysburg. He believes that tractor continues to be in that general area.

ANSWER — A reader requested information on how to grow herbs such as cilantro, oregano, and cumin. Thanks to Sylvia Johnston, member of the Delaware Herbalists, for sending the following information.

• Cilantro is the leaf of the herb coriander. Plant seeds of coriander in full sun or partial shade in moderately rich, well-drained soil. Sow seeds every two weeks for continuous supply of leaves.

• Cumin seeds should be planted in full sun and well drained soil. It needs at least three months of hot weather to mature. It grows only six inches in height. The blooms turn to tiny seeds.

• Oregano is a tender perennial. It grows to 2½ feet with broad, oval, dark green leaves. Flowers are pale pink. Grow in full sun and well drained soil. Keep lightly moist. It can be propagated by cuttings and root divisions.

ANSWER — Thanks to Doris Brenize, Shippensburg for sending the correct address to receive clear jel and Dutch jel leaflets, which is the Country Pantry, 1430 Rowe Rd., Shippensburg, PA 17257.

ANSWER — Mark Stoltzfus, 74 A McIlvanie Rd., Paradise, PA 17562, wants to know if anyone has a Great American Express train that no longer works. Thanks to Pastor Philip Smith for writing that New Bright LTD has made a series of similar trains in recent years. He recommends that Stoltzfus check the toy department of stores such as Boscov's, mall toy stores, and even Goodwill stores. Other good sources are the Paradise gift shop at the Strasburg Railroad and the Railroad Museum of Pennsylvania (across the street from the Strasburg station) and Traintown Shops of the Choo-Choo Barn on Route 741 ½ mile east of the Strasburg Station.

The train was made by new Bright LTD. Stoltzfus wants the engine and coal carrier or at least the coal carrier.

Exhibit Flag Etiquette

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Rep. Raymond Bunt Jr. (R-147) is encouraging Pennsylvanians to exhibit etiquette when displaying the flag during Operation Enduring Freedom.

"The flag is a sacred symbol for our country, and great care should be used with it," Bunt said. "It's a matter of tremendous respect to obey the rules of etiquette that accompany the showing of our flag."

The lawmaker cited the following flag etiquette:

• When the national flag is displayed flat, either horizontally or vertically, on a wall or in a window, the union (blue field) should be at the top and to the observer's left when facing the flag.

• When displayed from a staff projecting from a windowsill, balcony, or the front of a building, the union (blue field) should be at the staff's peak (unless the flag is at half-staff).

• It is the universal custom to display the flag only from sunrise to sunset. However, when a patriotic effect is desired, the flag may be displayed 24 hours a day if properly illuminated during the darkness hours.

• When displayed on a stage or platform, the national flag should be to the speaker's right. Any other flag is on the speaker's left.

• When suspended, the flag should be vertical with the union to the north over an east-west street and to the east over a north-south street. The flag should be hoisted out union (blue field) first.

• Flag decals and stickers may be correctly displayed on the inside of motor vehicle side windows.

Winter Squash And Pumpkins

Lancaster County horticulture agent Tim Elkner has been growing a variety of squash and pumpkins at the Penn State Research Farm, Landisville.

He suggests that you select winter squash and pumpkins for eating that are heavy for their size, have shiny skin and no cracks, bruises or decayed spots. The stem should be attached. Avoid any with a soft spot on the stem end.

Store in a cool (50-60°F.) dry area. They will keep for several months if they are mature and the stem is attached. Refrigeration may change the flavor and texture.

To freeze, wash outside before cutting. Remove rind and boil or steam, roast or microwave cubes of the flesh until fork tender. Drain well and mash or puree. Measure in one cup portions and place in rigid freezer containers or freezer bags. Freeze for up to one year. Puree can be used in recipes calling for the same amount of solid pack canned pumpkin. Do not freeze raw winter squash or pumpkin.

To can, wash, cut flesh into one-inch cubes. Boil two minutes in water. Caution: Do not mash or puree (pureeing makes the product too dense for canning at home). Fill jars with cubes and cooking liquid, leaving one-inch headspace. Adjust lids and process in a pressure canner. Process pints for 55 minutes and quarts for 90 minutes in a pressure canner at 10 pounds of pressure. To use, drain jars and mash cubes.

Rare Books, Antiquarian Book Seller Find Home In Restored Mill

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

KINZERS (Lancaster Co.) — "When I'm sitting and reading a fine book by the fire, a Rockefeller may be as well occupied as I, but no better," said Ron Lieberman, antiquarian bookseller.

Lieberman has thousands of fine books, so many that he is certain to always have a different one to read, and assure he is always "well occupied."

Lieberman and his wife Isabel restored an old stone mill, where they live on the second floor, and store books on three other floors. Interspersed among the shelves and stacks of boxes filled with books are the unique mill features such as a turbine, wooden wheels, and gears.

The mill tastefully maintains its original features yet incorporates modern conveniences to provide unique and stately living space. From mahogany-finished floors to the deep-silled windows with views of the Pequea Creek, the mill's tailrace, and the rural countryside. The mill combines the best features of a bygone era with those of the 21st century.

A mill on the site in 1739 was replaced about 1750 with the present stone mill. A fire destroyed the interior in the 1930s, and it was then rebuilt. It was used as a flour mill until the 1960s and after that as a site for a furniture and craft business.

When the Liebermans purchased the structure in 1998, the building had deteriorated, but the Liebermans envisioned its rebirth into a home for themselves and their many books. The foundation needed to be redone, the floors sanded, walls plastered, and a heating system installed. One thing that did not need to be changed was the massive beams, the perfect size and heft to support the weight of thousands of books. How many books, no one knows.

"Anyone who can tell you how many books he has doesn't have very many books," Lieberman said.

He also has an extensive art collection and has issued catalogs in many fields such as incunabulum (books printed before 1501), Pennsylvania-Americana, German-Americana, fine bindings, printing history and typography, photographic, and other subjects.

Lieberman purchased his first old book, a Philadelphia Ledger Almanac, when he was only five years old. He had learned to read when he was four years old. His parents were avid readers who read to him a lot, but his reading aptitude was also stimulated by his bedroom floor linoleum imprinted with pictures and nursery rhymes. He recalls that as a preschooler, he often fell out of bed while stretching to read the words on the floor.

Lieberman's love for words and the fascinating history reading uncovered motivated him to become a historian. For many years, Lieberman was in sales for a large corporation. For pastime in the areas he visited, he haunted bookstores and eventually those filled with old books.

He recalls paying $35 for his first old book.

"It was scandalous to pay so much money for an old book, because I really couldn't afford it at the time," Lieberman said.

Nonetheless, Lieberman pursued an interest in collecting old books, many pertaining to the Civil War.

"Someday I'd like to retire and become an antiquarian bookseller," Lieberman told his wife. The more he thought of working at a job for 30-40 years before he could retire and do something he really loved, the more he saw the irony in it and decided to take the plunge.

The Liebermans moved to Isabel's family farm. She said that her husband promised her that if their bank account went below $1,000, he would find a regular-paying job. It wasn't long before their account dwindled below the specified amount; but by that time, Isabel saw potential for the volatile business and encouraged her husband to continue the bookseller venture. She assists in the business by cataloging the books.

Lieberman studied and read everything he could about book collecting, why people collect, and what they want to collect. Lieberman displayed his collection of books at a few antique shows, and some Civil War books at military reenactments.

In conversations with people, Lieberman would mention some little-known but interesting facts he had read about. These tidbits often whetted curiosity and Lieberman would introduce them to the book where he had read it.

This concept is what Lieberman calls a hook, one that challenges him to find a point of intrigue to capture a potential customer.

Lieberman's stock expanded to Americana, Pennsylvania German books, imprints, and related stuff.

Through reading the books he acquired, his interests expanded to the 1700s era of Europe. From there, he became absorbed in the earliest printed books — Incunabulum (1450-1501).

Soon Lieberman became known for his expertise and was asked to help build collections throughout the U.S. In Lancaster County, he worked closely with such places as Millersville University and Franklin and Marshall College.

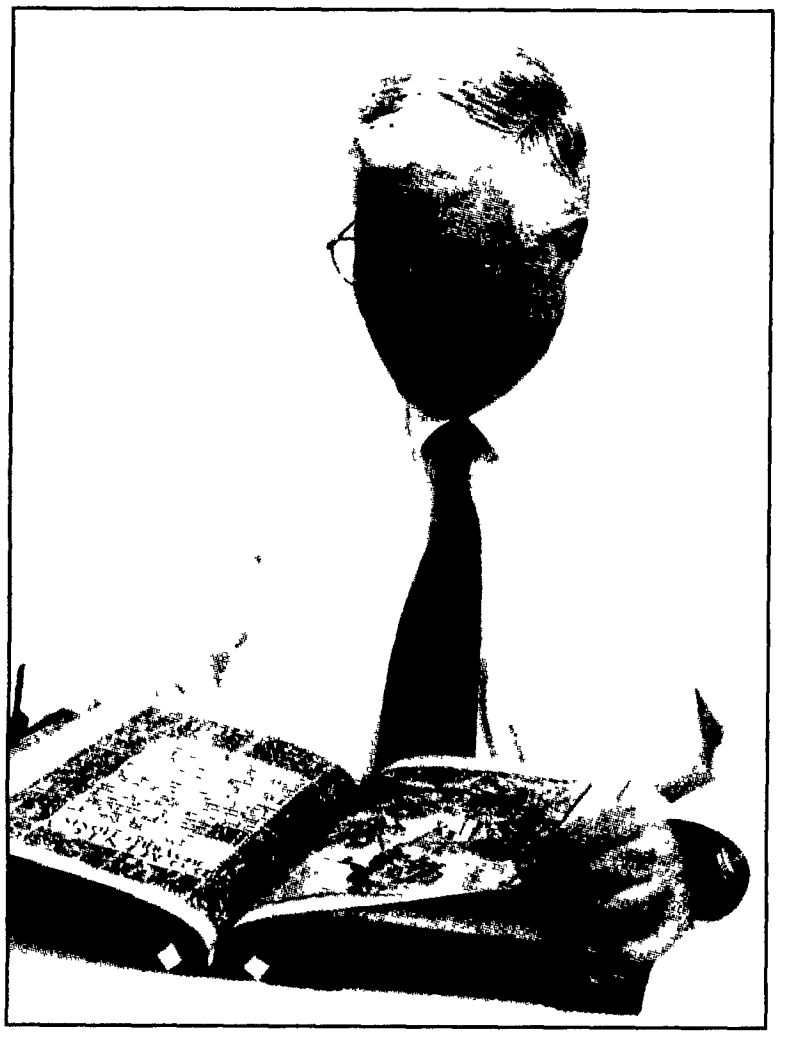
Lieberman frequently lectures professional groups and universities, and serves as an appraiser for private and for "antique roadshow" types of events. Lieberman also serves as a resource for the Smithsonian Institute, Money Magazine, the FBI, Kipplinger Magazine, and many others.

"It's a pleasant way to make very little money," Lieberman said of being an antiquarian bookseller, rare book and manuscript appraiser, and library consultant.

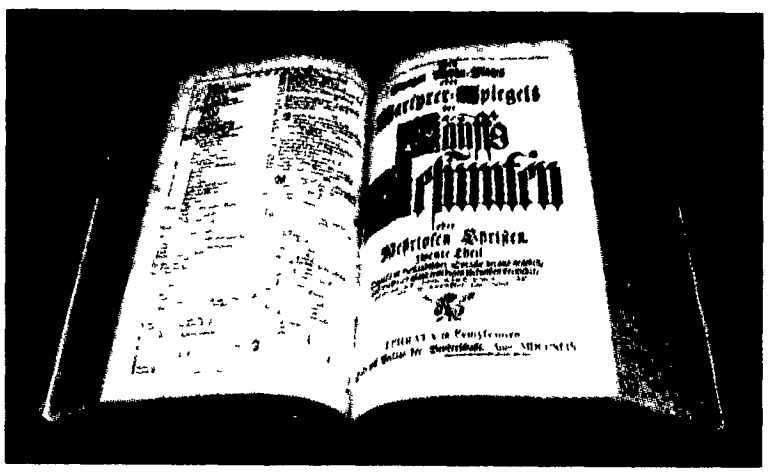
He admits he had some lucky breaks in the beginning. When trying to locate a book for a potential client, a bookseller on the West Coast sent him a $15,000 book with no required money down or identification to examine for 15 days.

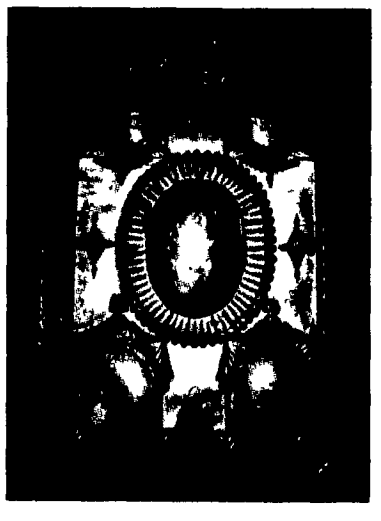
"If you treat people honorably, they will treat you honorably,"

(Turn to Page B24)



Ron Lieberman, antiquarian bookseller, rare book and manuscript appraiser, and library consultant, examines a missal from the 1540s.





A 200-year-old Russian Gospel Lectionary with metal binding and wooden medallions of the apostles plated in nickel, silver, and gold. The medallions are worn from the custom of Russians kissing the pictures of saints as an act of religious devotion.

The original 1738 mill was replaced in 1750 with this structure. Fire destroyed the interior in the 1930s but was rebuilt. The Liebermans completed extensive remodeling in 1999. They live on the second floor, and use the basement, first, and third floors to house their extensive book collection.

Restored Mill

Lieberman said.

Buying books at auction often requires a substantial investment. For this reason, Lieberman said he tries not to buy on impulse but researches material that seems reasonably likely to realize a fair return. He looks at material from artistic, creative, and scholarly viewpoints.

Typical of antiques, some pieces bring substantial profits, and others do not sell. Lieberman recalls he bought a $15,000 book, sold it for $35,000, which was resold for $48,000.

The Internet has both helped and hindered bookselling. Some books originally believed to be scarce pop up on Internet sales and show they are not rare. But if it truly is a rare book, the Internet reveals that also and the value of the book increases considerably.

Much to his advantage in his book dealings is that Lieberman has what is termed an eidetic memory, which enables him to remember the shape of a book, the location he saw it, and its exact appearance — except the color because he is color blind.

"You learn something from every book you pick up, Lieberman said. "This is a business that requires constant learning. One must be knowledgeable about many different subjects in order to assist clients.

"It's always a great temptation to allow my business to become a hobby," Lieberman said of the books he would like to add to his own collection. "One should not collect what he sells or he will be in competition with his customers."

At auctions, Lieberman is prone to check out possibilities ahead of time and leave bids rather than stick around for the sales.

The York County farm was sold, requiring them to find another place for their extensive book collection. As soon as they saw the mill, they knew it would be the perfect spot.

The Liebermans' move to the Kinzers' mill required moving one and a half trailer loads of books. It took 20 neighboring Amishmen 2½ hours to unload the cartons of books while Lieberman directed the location to place them. The books are stored on three floors, but easily located with Lieberman's memory.

Although the mill seems to be the perfect place for historical books, it is not without its drawbacks. This past June, the area had six inches of rain within one and a half hours. Neighboring Amish helped the Liebermans lug 200 boxes up the stairs from the bottom floor.

"Dampness is a constant problem, and one I didn't consider when I purchased the property," Lieberman said. The renovations also required more than expected. Nonetheless, the mill, for its living space, panoramic views, and storage for books, brings great joy for the Liebermans.

The Liebermans call their bookseller business the Family Album, derived from one of their first exposures to auctions in which they discovered multiple photos in a family album. They were intrigued but nonplused that family members would discard family photos.

The Family Album enables a peep into the past, which the Liebermans can provide on almost every subject. Hours are by appointment only.

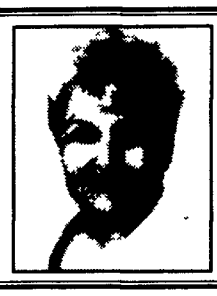
THE ANTIQUE DETECTIVE

Anne Gilbert



Quality Determines Prices For Rookwood Pottery

So you've just discovered a small pottery vase not only signed "Rookwood", but with an artist's signature at a garage sale! And, for this great discovery you paid $90. A lot of money at a garge sale but couldn't it be worth thousands?

At home you excitedly grab your Handy-Dandy Price Guide. Sure enough the artist and a similar piece are listed for $200. Closer examination shows the piece is a rather dull, brown matte glaze. You paid for the name and a signature, not quality.

The Rookwood Pottery, established in Cincinatti, Ohio in 1879 by Maria Longworth Nicholas Storer, was at the forefront of a growing American Art pottery movement.

Initially art pottery was made by creative craftsmen as an attempt to fight againts mass produced ceramics. By banding together in studios the artists-potters created objects of art priced for the masses. Rookwood used an assembly line technique for standard shapes of inexpensive mass produced lines. However, museum quality pieces were created by individual designers early on. It is these pieces that command thousands of dollars today.

Names and designs are important. Among the Rookwood artists, look for Kataro Shirayamandani (1865-1948) who gave the subject matter of Japanese art to American pottery. Also considered one of Rookwood's finest decorators was Albert Valentien who specialized in floral motifs. Another artist, Elizabeth Lingenfelter working in 1910 began using the newly popular lighter colors.

Quality earlier pieces are always higher priced. For instance, tho Shiraymandani worked into the 1940s prices are lower than even the 1920s.

CLUES: Art pottery has been faked since the 1970s, when there was a revival of interest among collectors. Trained potters from Japan and Italy have been faking the early Rookwood tiger eye glazes. While the clay is soft they stamp in the proper marks, including artists initials. Often, new decorations are even applied over old pieces.

Other problems for collectors can come from the many vases turned into lamps. Don't let anyone try to palm off a Rookwood style vase-lamp on you unless it has the trademark, "Rookwood Pottery" stamped into the metal base. if you know your Rookwood, it is possible that you have a vase-lamp that had been privately taken to a shop for drilling, had a paper label, now long gone. Research, research.

ANTIQUE DETECTIVE

The Rookwood Pottery outlasted its competitors (1880-1967). The popular, older, tiger-eye crystalline glaze was revived in the 1920s as a shimmering yellow or green glaze.

Rookwood Dragon vase, c.1892. Signed Kataro Shirayamadani. Photo by Mint Museum, Charlotte, N.C.

The glaze was formed by the crystallization of chrome oxide crystals in the glaze during the cooling process. It continued to be made up to 1950.

Over the years there have been many marks. One of the most informative guides to marks and glazes for Rookwood and other American Art Pottery is "Kovel's American Art Pottery," Crown Publishers, 1993, by Ralph and Terry Kovel.

Since it was the fine glazes that were partially responsible for the success of Rookwood, the loss of their best technicians in the late 1940s speeded up the decline in quality. The decorative pieces made to sell inexpensively in gift shops weren't successful.

Among the items you may come across are glazed ashtrays, unglazed bisque for amateur hobbyists, in the form of vases, paperweights, and bookends. However, since they have a Rookwood name people pay up to $200 or more.

Serious collectors can view examples at museums around the country.

Agco Launches New "Agco®" Tractor Brand

ATLANTA, Ga. — Agco Corporation is introducing three new lines of Agco® brand tractors this fall. The Agco brand first appeared on new Agco ST Compact tractors introduced late last year, and now identifies a full tractor line from 22.9 engine horsepower compacts to 225 PTO high-performance models.

Agco Corporation, a global, multi-brand, agricultural equipment company, manufacturers and distributes tractors under the Agco®Allis, Agco ST, Agcostar®, Fendt™, Massey Ferguson® and White brands. The Agco®Allis and White tractor lines are now combined into the new Agco tractor line.

"Our goal, with the full support of our dealers, is to focus our resources on the growth of a single tractor brand instead of two, and build one strong brand that will offer farmers the advanced technology and productivity they expect and demand," said John Shumejda, president and chief executive officer.

The 22.9 to 44.2 engine horsepower Agco ST Series compact tractors, introduced in late 2000, feature three- and four-cylinder diesel engines and four-wheel drive.

The 70 and 85 PTO horsepower Agco LT Series tractors feature renowned Cummins "B" Series turbocharged four-cylinder engines in cab or folding ROPS models, and with two-wheel drive or powered front axle.

The 95 to 145 PTO horsepower Agco RT Series tractors feature turbocharged six-cylinder versions of Cummins "B" Series engines in cab or two-post ROPS (95 and 115 hp models) models, and with two-wheel drive or powered front axle.

The 160 to 225 PTO horsepower Agco DT Series tractors feature popular turbocharged Cummins "C" Series engines, deluxe cabs, electronic-controlled powershift transmissions and powered front axles.

"All of the new 70 to 225 PTO horsepower Agco tractors will share the same bright orange color that has distinguished Allis tractors since the early 1900s," reports Dennis Heinecke, general marketing manager for the new Agco tractors. "We're very proud of our Agco heritage which, in addition to Allis Chalmers, includes Minneapolis-Moline, Oliver and White. The new Agco tractors will continue to carry on the technological leadership and quality that defined these brands. And we will continue to provide long-term parts support for all owners of Agco®Allis and White tractors, plus upgrade packages and programs for future maintenance requirements."

Soybean Assoc. Urges Fair Treatment In Farm Policies

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The American Soybean Association (ASA) reacted positively to the release of long-term farm policy priorities by both the USDA and by Democrats in the U.S. Senate. A primary goal for ASA in the farm bill debate is ensuring that soybeans are treated fairly and equitably as program crops.

"The Administration and Senate Democrats appropriately recognized the need for an effective safety net to offset low commodity prices and farm income within a comprehensive approach to other key issues, including conservation, trade policy and rural development," said ASA President Bart Ruth, a soybean producer from Rising City, Nebraska. "ASA is particularly pleased that both sets of principles endorse enhanced conservation stewardship initiatives on productive farmland and a boost in development of renewable energy products, including soy-based biodiesel."

The release of the USDA's "Report on Food and Agriculture Policy for the New Century" Sept. 19 came as the House of Representatives prepares to consider the farm bill passed by the House Agriculture Committee in July.

Simultaneously, the Senate Agriculture Committee is deciding how to proceed with its own version of the omnibus farm policy legislation. It is doubtful that the farm bill process can be completed before Congress adjourns, which is expected by the end of October.

Ruth said, "In reviewing the USDA Report, ASA recognizes the constraints that the federal budget and domestic support commitments under the World Trade Organization place on development of the next farm program."

Ruth cautioned, however, that such constraints should not come at the expense of providing producers with an adequate safety net in the form of the marketing loan program, fixed decoupled payments, and counter-cyclical income support. ASA testified in favor of including each of these domestic farm program components in testimony before both Agriculture Committees earlier this year.

Responding to the Senate Democrat proposal, Ruth stated, "ASA appreciates the emphasis placed on increasing foreign food assistance, including through the Global Food for Education Initiative, and for foreign market development. Soybean producers will work closely with USDA officials and the Senate to develop farm program provisions that address the long-term needs of all U.S. producers, in a manner that recognizes the importance of soybeans as the highest-value U.S. export crop."

NFU Affirms Clean Air Rules, Renewable Fuels

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Farmers Union (NFU) applauded the defeat of an amendment to the House Energy Bill Aug. 2 that would have waived the gasoline clean octane provisions of the Clean Air Act for California and reduced the use of renewable fuels in the state. The 300 to 125 vote to defeat this measure followed the efforts of NFU and several other organizations committed to family farmers, renewable energy, and clean air and water.

"We commend the members of the House of Representatives for this action that will benefit farmers but also promote air quality and pursues an energy policy that recognizes the long-term needs for renewable energy sources found on America's farms," said Leland Swenson, president of NFU.

The amendment, offered by Reps. Christopher Cox, R-Calif., and Henry Waxman, D-Calif., would have provided California an exemption from clean air rules that require oxygenate in gasoline. California had requested waivers from this rule from the current and previous administrations, through the Environmental Protection Agency, both of which were rejected.

Farmers Union is also urging the adoption of legislation establishing a Renewable Fuels Standard (RFS) that could triple the demand for crops used to make ethanol and biodiesel and a Renewable Fuels Reserve that will ensure an adequate and reliable supply of commodities used to make renewable fuels.

SEMINAR I

10 AM From Field to Feed Bunk – The Handling & Storage of Forages
Presented By: Kevin James - Ag Bag Intl.
Robert L. Francis - Sollenberger Silo

Bob is a native of West Virginia, but as a young man his family moved to a farm in neighboring Southwest Virginia, where his formal education then took place. He received his B S and M S degrees from Virginia Tech in Agricultural Education, Extension Education, and Agricultural Economics

After graduating from VA Tech, Bob began his career by teaching Vocational Agriculture and then serving as County Agent and Farm Management Agent for the Cooperative Extension Service He later moved into the business arena to manage a large dairy and livestock farm of over 2,000 acres, and up to 1,500 head of livestock The farm had 6 upright silos and 6 bunkers with some feed being stored in large round bales He experienced first hand the advantages, disadvantages and problems associated with various methods of feed storage and handling

Bob also served four years as an Agricultural Banking Officer before moving to Pennsylvania to become associated with SOLLENBERGER SILOS CORP in 1984

Always associated with agriculture, Bob believes the future is good for those in agriculture who gather information, plan ahead, and make sound decisions

SEMINAR II

1 PM Creating A TMR – The Methods And Mechanics Of Mixing
Presented By: Tony Hall - TMR Specialist - KEENAN USA

Born in England, Tony graduated with a B.Sc. in Biochemistry, and an M.Sc in Animal Nutrition He worked for 14 years with the British government's agricultural extension service (ADAS), specializing in forage quality, dairy cow feeding systems, and milk component (butterfat and true protein) production. He is a member of the British Institute of Biology.

Tony spent 2 years in the British feed supply trade, and joined Keenan as a TMR Specialist in 1993 At Keenan, he worked alongside dairy farmers in Britain, Ireland, Germany, Denmark, Chile, Argentina, and Australia, on a wide range of issues related to rumen health and milk components

His professional ambition is to promote as much information as possible to help farmers manage out "sub-clinical rumen acidosis" in their herds

SEMINAR III

2 PM 2001 Corn Silage Quality – Results of a Capital Region Project
Presented By: Virginia Ishler - Penn State Dairy and Animal Science
Tim Beck, Capital Region Dairy Program Coordinator

Capital region agronomy and dairy agents collected corn silage samples in each of the seven counties in the region this past fall Both harvest samples and feed-out samples have been analyzed to assess the quality of this year's corn silage crop Neutral detergent fiber is a key regulator of dry matter intake in dairy cow rations A cow's capacity to consume feed is primarily regulated by NDF in the ration Both the rate and extent of NDF digestion influence how quickly forages are digested and to what extent Virginia Ishler will address these concepts of NDF digestibility and its influence on dry matter intake during the opening presentation

This year's corn silage on average has higher than normal NDF levels and lower than normal starch content The data collected from these samples also included lignin, in vitro NDF digestibility data and starch analysis Using these numbers to calculate Milk2000 ratings for the forage samples showed some interesting results Samples with the same NDF values and similar starch levels, show very different energy values when the extent of lignification and thus the resulting reduced digestibility are considered. Almost 900 lbs. of milk per ton difference was noted between the high and low samples in the analysis. This could result in vastly different cow performance from these samples Some additional forage testing may be warranted to more accurately assess the value of your corn silage crop Tim Beck will present this information during the second half of this session

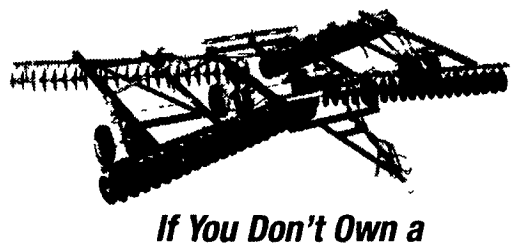
Nothing Compares to a Krause Disc

"The Krause discs are made well and are tough enough to get the job done On our last Krause disc, the original bearings lasted 18 years "

Dale Hoover, Hoover Farms Lebanon, Pa



If You Don't Own a Krause Disc, Isn't It Time?

Dale Hoover farms over 500 acres in Lebanon, PA and often encounters rocky fields and narrow roads. So when he wanted a new disc, he bought another Krause Disc from Hoober. "We have some very rocky fields and the new Krause 7300 Disc stood up to the rocks. We used it for over 400 acres so far this year and didn't have any problems. And the disc has a narrow transport of 11' 6" which is an important factor, because we do a lot of transporting on the roads," says Dale

Another important factor for Dale was the resale value of Krause "We bought our first Krause disc from Hoober in 1981, and it was still in good shape when we traded it this year – they really have great resale value."

And to ensure that Dale's Krause disc stays in the field, Hoober backs it with top-notch service and parts support "They have always had the parts we need and we were very pleased with the service we got," says Dale.

"We had a John Deere combine before and we upgraded to International because of the performance and the rotor. We have a Case IH 2188 now and we like how aggressive it is – you can really harvest faster Hoober service has been excellent on the combine, they are friendly and good guys to work with. They will work on weekends if possible to help us out where other companies may not "

"We've got a 7110 and a 7130 Magnum right now and I love the cab, they shift real nice and they have plenty of power. Magnums are just all around nice tractors - You can go out in any kind of weather and they'll start. I've put over 4,000 hours on the 7110 and I've had no problems other than minor things like tires. I really like International tractors, but it's not the color, it's the service that counts when you buy farm machinery. Hoober knows their machines inside and out and they treat us well."

THE LEADER IN THE FIELD

The high yield you really wanted?
Or the high drying bill you really didn't?

Plan ahead.

Your seed dealer will work closely with you to select a powerful portfolio of NK® Brand hybrids to meet your needs. Including the need for high-yielding hybrids that mature earlier to help prevent a big drying bill. Together, we'll help spread your risk through different agronomic traits, maturities and technologies. So you'll be ready for all the problems you anticipate. And even those you don't.

DAYCO SUPER II V-BELTS

Now there's a belt that beats the toughest drive problems.

Many heavy-duty industrial machines demand more than conventional wrapped v-belts can stand Their punishing drives make ordinary belts crack under pressure The result unnecessary and expensive downtime

Now there s a solution to the consistent costly problem of replacing or retensioning belts It s the revolutionary new Super II™ v-belt from Dayco The Super II belt was designed specifically for the most brutal applications And its performance blows the cover off conventional wrapped belts

In heavy torque high horsepower and extreme shock load comparisons it s not even a contest The Super II v-belt is stronger more flexible and lasts far longer

Innovative design & construction provide extra strength and stamina

The secret to the Super II v-belt s durability is its unique construction The central position of the polyester cords in the neoprene rubber core provides greater strength balance and longer life Multiple fabric plies top and bottom enhance flexibility And Dayco s unique raw-edged construction gives it a better grip for controlled slippage

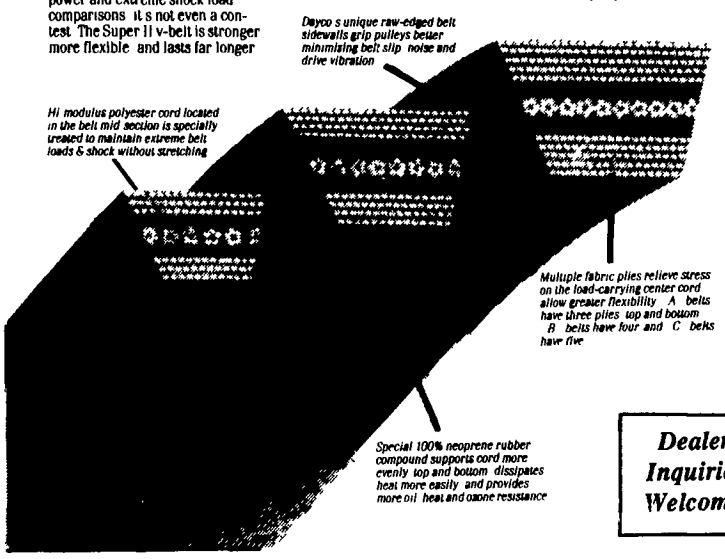
These attributes combined make the Super II belt superior to conventional wrapped belts in every way

Test the Super II v-belt on your toughest drive

The Super II v-belt was field-tested for two years on the most severe applications rock quarry shaker screens lumber mill tree debarkers and pipe descalers In every case it outperformed conventional wrapped belts by a wide margin But the only test that really counts is the one you do on your own equipment

Try the Super II belt on your toughest drive problem You ll be so amazed by its incredible endurance that you ll want to put it on all your drives In fact we re so sure you ll be pleased with the performance of the Super II v-belt that in the unlikely event you re not satisfied we ll refund the original purchase price or replace it with a conventional wrapped v-belt

The Super II v-belt from Dayco The super problem solver



Dayco s unique raw-edged belt sidewalls grip pulleys better minimizing belt slip noise and drive vibration
Hi modulus polyester cord located in the belt mid section is specially treated to maintain extreme belt loads & shock without stretching
Multiple fabric plies relieve stress on the load-carrying center cord allow greater flexibility A belts have three plies top and bottom B belts have four and C belts have five
Special 100% neoprene rubber compound supports cord more evenly top and bottom dissipates heat more easily and provides more oil heat and ozone resistance

Workshop Brings New Perspectives On North American Ag Trade

CHICAGO, Ill. — In discussions that focused on the challenges and successes of free trade agreements in North America, trade experts from three countries detailed the changes they have seen in North American agricultural trade over the last decade and offered a look at issues that may arise as the 2002 Farm Bill debate begins.

At a workshop organized by Farm Foundation as part of the annual meetings of the American Agricultural Economics Association and the Canadian Agricultural Economics Society, economists and trade experts agreed that the 1988 North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and the Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement (CUSTA) generally were responsible for the growth in trade among the neighboring countries.

"There has been explosive growth in the value of agricultural trade among the United States, Canada and Mexico, beginning in the early 1980s," Thomas Vollrath of the USDA said. "Since the inception of CUSTA and NAFTA, agricultural trade among partner countries has increased from $10.7 billion in 1987-88 to $18 billion in 1997-98."

Vollrath also noted that the market shares of both Canadian and Mexican exports to the United States have been much larger than the proportion of total U.S. exports to those countries.

Canadian-agriculture has seen tremendous growth since NAFTA's implementation. Between 1989 and 2000, Canadian agricultural exports to the United States grew by 275 percent, and U.S. exports to Canada grew by 160 percent. In 1999, Mexico was Canada's fourth-largest agri-food export market. "There has been a greater increase for Canadian exports of agriculture commodities and products to the United States than for U.S. exports to Canada," Dr. Won Koo of the North Dakota State University Trade Research Center said.

"The two countries are each other's best customers," Charlie Mayer, former Canadian minister of agriculture, said. "We want to trade [with these countries] and barriers have come down. I think that the prosperity we are enjoying is due in large part to the reduction of trade barriers that has occurred thus far."

Mexican producers and officials view the trade agreements as incentives to grow as well. "The agreements have been very positive for Mexico," Roberto Aceves of the Mexican Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock, Rural Development, Fisheries and Food said. "They are important factors in promoting rural development and promoting exports. We have seen an annual growth rate of eight percent in foreign trade. Mexico is very comfortable with NAFTA."

But, according to some experts, progress still needs to be made in terms of anticipating and resolving trade disputes and instituting consistent agricultural policies in the three nations.

"The potential for future trade disputes will diminish in direct proportion to the success in developing converging, but not necessarily identical agricultural policies and support levels," Michael Gifford, an economic consultant on international trade policy, said.

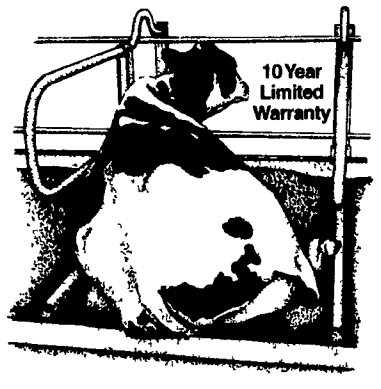
Waterbeds for Cows



ALANTA®

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 10-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE
The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape. It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter.

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In failure the ALANTA waterbed [illegible]

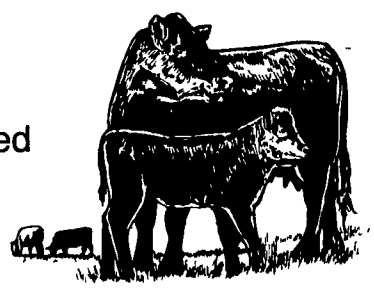
BEEF TIPS

Early Weaning pays off, research reveals



Ohio State University researchers compared calves weaned at 100 days and calves weaned at the traditional 205 days. The early weaned calves grew faster, were heavier, and were harvested 34 days earlier than the calves that were left on their mothers for 205 days. Simmental influenced steers consistently outgain other breeds in tests around the country. Call for a FREE directory and map of ALL Simmental breeders in your area. Courtesy of:

Announcing:

Crude Soy Oil Now Available

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer soybean oil as an animal nutrition product. Processing the soybeans ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

Crude Soybean Oil

A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. Crude soy oil is a natural alternative to animal fats and provides needed energy in various rations.

Uses of Crude Soy Oil Include:

- Use as a high energy feed ingredient in swine and poultry diets.
- Especially useful in sow lactation diets, pig starter and grow/finish diets.
- Used as an added energy source in broiler, turkey and layer feeds.
- Can be used for dust control purposes.
- Can be used as a lubricant for feeding systems.

Advantages of Crude Soy Oil:

- Use as a direct replacement for animal fat.
- Vegetable based product.
- Holding tank does not need to be heated if temperature is above 30 degrees, which reduces storage and handling costs compared to animal fat.
- Bulk delivery, partial loads available direct to farm by Keystone Mills.
- Customer may pick up to save delivery costs.

Other Soy Products Available:

- Keystone offers Golden Pro 46 XP which is 46% protein - 6-7% oil, Golden Meal 40 which is 40% crude protein with 18% oil.
